HOW THE BETTING STANDS ON STATE ELECTION.

The Father Yorke Incident—Pardee Will be the Winner—How Managers Figure on the Result—The S. P. Company.

BY THE KNAVE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Tonight the pool-room betting on the Governorship is 10 to 8 in favor of Lane. The pool-boxes are full of Lane money and Harry Corbett has quietly tipped some of his Republican friends that if they hold off they probably can get 10 to 7.

It is hard to figure why the betting has changed in this way. Up till the last few days the odds in Los Angeles were in favor of Pardee—first $100 to $80; then $100 to $65. But they have backed down until telegrams on Thursday sent to get the complexion of the betting brought the response, "All Lane money here now." In this city there have been no odds on Pardee for quite a while, but nobody thought the bets would go anything better than even money.

The Lane men hve rushed in, however, and there is no denying that the Democratic nominee is more and more on the long end.

Some people have attributed the recent change to the rough reception given Dr. Pardee at the Union and Risdon Iron Works. I am told the Risdon men forgot their American manhood today as the Union Iron workmen did on Wednesday and pelted the Republican candidate when he spoke to them. The story is current that an apple struck the doctor in the face. Though he passed through the ordeals in a way to win the admiration of all right-thinking men, the attitude of the union workers has clinched the impression that the great bulk of the Union Labor vote will go to Lane. That may have influenced the professional betting.

Then, again, there was the failure of Father Yorke to say a word on politics in his lecture the other night. I don't know who was responsible for the yarn, but the word went out all up and down the State that Father Yorke would would come out and indorse Pardee. It was recalled what assistance the great controversialist gave to Gage four years ago, and it was urged that he was sure to do the same for the Republican candidate this year. The fact that last Saturday's "Leader" had a full page write-up of Pardee with a portrait of the doctor, lent color to the idea that Father Yorke, who writes editorials for the paper, was working in Pardee's interest. Few people know that the asterisk at the end of that article meant that it was a polltical advertisement.

And Father Yorke himself seemed willing to let the notion go abroad that he would talk some politics in his lecture. The tickets sold freely because of that idea, and the house was jammed. The Democrats were scared and the Republicans hopeful. Then, when the lecturer said no word for Pardee and kept carefully away from politics, there is no doubt the effect was to hurt the Republican candidate, and this very likely had some influence on the betting. Political managers should be very sure of their ground before letting out a boast like that about Yorke's indorsement, because if they do not "make good" they are apt to do much harm. It is now taken for granted that Father Yorke will not indorse any candidate as he hasn't even said a word for his friend Livernash.

In one statement, however, the Republican managers have been entirely correct. They have been saying that the railroad—meaning, of course, the Southern Pacific—would declare for Pardee. Well, Mr. Herrin came back this week, and, calling his lieutenants to him, he said:

"The business interests of the East would consider it a very bad thing if California went Democratic this year. So the railroad favors the election of Pardee."

That ought to be good news for the Republicans, as after the defeat of Gage for the renomination, there was a general sulk among the railroad political workers all along the line. They contributed nothing and did no work in Pardee's behalf. But now I am given to understand the railroad has done a little something financially to aid the Republican cause, the Herrin lieutenants are at work, and the orders are to go out as of old.

Beyond this, the Republican managers have excellent reports from the country. They sent out to County Committee Chairmen and others, and asked for estimates of the vote. They were particular to caution their informants that hot air figures were not wanted, but genuine 'estimates "to work on." Then the estimates were gone over and carefully pruned. The were cut down to what was considered a perfectly safe and certain basis. And even, at that, Pardee would come to San Francisco 14,000 to the good. The Republican managers do not give Lane over 5,000 plurality in this city. So, on their figures and estimates, the Republican leader is sure to win by at least 9,000 votes, which is a big margin to make mistakes on.

Southern California generally reported well. San Diego, Riverside and San Bernardino sent word that big Republican majorities were certain there. Los Angeles county, outside of the city, was reported in excellent shape. There is some slumping in the city, but it is not believed to be serious. Still, after Henry Harris, the baseball man, had come up from the South, he bet $400 against $1,200 that Los Angeles city would go for Lane. He declared that there were so many Republicans down there declaring an intention to vote for the Democratic nominee that the odds of three to one tempted him. But Harris made the bet just as a flyer. He has made a book on the election, in which he is sure to win, no matter whether Pardee or Lane is elected: so he just ventured that $400 as a chance on the odds.

Los Angeles city, however, is the most uncertain political quantity in the State. Two years ago it gave McKinley something like 3,500 plurality, and in about a month it turned around and elected a Democratic Mayor, Snyder, by a matter of 3,000 or thereabouts. So no wonder the odds attracted the shrewd Harris.

Over in Marin county I am told of a man who wants to bet $100 that that county will give Pardee a plurality of at least 500. That would be a distinct Republican gain. Harry Eickoff, a Democrat, who was Mayor of San Rafael, has been quoted as saying that there really is nothing to the election but Pardee—that the Lane men make the noise, but that the Pardee men will cast the votes.

So just where the betting men get their idea that the odds should be on Lane it is hard to figure. The biggest betting I have heard of has been done by a man named Mitchell of the M. & M. saloon on Kearney street, who is reported to have nearly $6,000 staked on Lane, most of it at even money. Senator Russ Lukens seems to have led the Republican betting, and he is credited with having three or four thousand dollars out on various propositions. There have been tales that Bob Mein has bet $1,000 here and another thousand there; but he says he has wagered only $750 altogether, and that $500 of that was that Pardee would not get over 3,500 plurality in Alameda county. The old bet of $1,000 a side between Lukens and Sam Leake that Lane would not lead Pardee by 7,500 in San Francisco seems to be the leading wager on the figures in this city. Arthur Fisher bet $500 that Lane would not get 5,000 plurality in this city, but he now thinks he has lost his money. George Beveridge, the mining man, has been hanging around the Palace Hotel for several days offering to bet $1,000 on Lane at even money, and saying he would find from $3,000 to $5,000 more of the same kind of money. The last I heard from him he had only placed $500 of his funds, and he has been much inclined to sneer at the faint-heartedness of the Republicans.

On the result of contests other than for Governor little betting is heard of. Sig Heller is reported to have bet $500 in the Concordia Club that Livernash would defeat Kahn, and $100 has been left at the Cosmos Club to wager the same way. That fight, however, is all in the air. No one knows anything about the strength of the Union la-vote, and it is hard to say how many Democrats will support Livernash. Generally speaking, the people you meet around the streets favor the chances of Kahn, though his attack on Livernash's sanity has unquestionably hurt his own chances. The Examiner man is so brilliant on the stump that the attack seems ludicrous as well as cruel.

The Democrats expect to elect Bell to Congress in the Second and Ashe in the Sixth. Beyond that they have hopes of Ford in the First; Livernash in the Fourth; Wynn in the Fifth and Smythe in the Eighth. But one of the leaders said to me last night: "If we get one it is a clear gain: we have a chance for two; and the rest is all the good, old-fashioned Democratic hope."

No one seems to think for a moment that any Democrat on the State ticket below the office of Governor has the remotest chance to win, and the speculations are all on which of the Republican nominees will receive the largest plurality. The Colgan supporters and the Shannon men were loudest in the claims on the first position. They even said they would lead Beatty. But now it is a widespread belief that your man Frank Jordan, with his wonderful campaigning facility, will receive the highest vote of all. He has left behind him wherever he has gone Democrats working and shouting for his candidacy. All through the country the same story is heard, and Jordan seems sure to receive a phenomenal vote. His opponent, a quiet young man, named Wilson, does not seem to have stirred outside of Sonoma county, and they are inclined to laugh at him even there.

PRESIDENT GOES ON HUNTING TRIP.

He is Taking Much Needed Recreation in the Country.

Roosevelt to Visit the Historical Battlefields in Virginia.

MANASSAS, Va., Nov. 1.—In the fitful glare of locomotive lanterns, President Roosevelt, at 4:30 a. m., stepped briskly from his private car in the railroad yard here and greeted cordially the little group of newspapermen, special officers and railway men who had gathered to see him start on his hunt for wild turkeys. He was attired in a khaki suit with leggings, a long heavy overcoat and a black hat.

The President and Secretary Root were joined at once by Surgeon-General Rixey, Secretary Cortelyou and J. T. Leachman, Sheriff of Prince William county. Sheriff Leachman was to act as guide of the party on the turkey hunt.

This morning the party hunted over a fine preserve of 1,000 acres, known locally as the Ben Lomond place, and owned by Representative John F. Rixey, a brother of Surgeon-General Rixey. While the President hoped to add a wild turkey or two to his hunting trophies, he said he was here particularly for the needed recreation the outing would afford him and for the purpose of getting over the historic Bull Run battlefields, which he had never visited. After the morning's hunt the party assembled about noon at the Henry House, which is in the very center of the operations of the first battle of Bull Run. There luncheon was served.

During the afternoon the President will drive over the battlefield. At 5:30 this afternoon the President and party on their special train will go to Brandy, Va., forty-nine miles south of Manassas, where they will be the guests until Monday morning of relatives of Surgeon-General Rixey.

IMPORTANT CASE IN SOUTHERN COURT.

Decision Over Franchise Rendered in Favor of the City.

Rights of the City Council Set Forth in the Opinion of Judge.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—Judge Olin Wellborn in the United States District Court today handed down a decision in the now celebrated case of the Pacific Electric Railway which is controlled by the Huntington-Hellman syndicate, against the city of Los Angeles, in the matter of the so-called freight franchise.

The decision is in favor of the city, Judge Wellborn holding the opinion that the electric railway company is not entitled to the franchise, it claims, although the municipal authorities did, he says, exceed the authority granted them by the Broughton act.

When the City Council granted the franchise to the Pacific Electric Railway, the people of this city protested vehemently against it. Mayor Snyder vetoed the franchise, but the company refused to take back the amount of its bid, $152,000, and it has remained in the City Treasury.

The railway company insisted that even had the Mayor signed the franchise this act would be but ministerial and perfunctory, as the Council had full power to grant a valid franchise.

FORGERY CAUSES BIG FIRM TO FAIL.

New Orleans Banks Robbed of Nearly Two Hundred Thousand.

Gives Notice to the Creditors That Bills Cannot Be Paid.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 1.—President E. J. Odendahl of the Odendahl Commission Company, Limited, one of the largest grain exporting firms in the United States, has issued the following circular to the grain trade;

"We regret very much to have to advise you that our firm is forced into liquidation and will not be able to pay its liabilities. You will spare us the necessity of making further explanations, as they are painful.

"Our business has been very profitable and large, but the profits have been diverted into other channels, not through any fault of the writer."

Today's circular follows a widely-circulated report of alleged forgeries on the part of a prominent officer of the firm, amounting to betwen $150,000 and $175,000, and at the present time the following banks are known to hold the company's paper in approximately these amounts:

Comptor Nationale D'Escompte de Paris, $70,000; Hibernia Bank and Trust Company, $50,000; Louisiana National Bank, $15,000; Commercial National Bank, $4,500.

F. J. Odendahl, president of the company, was formerly president of the New Orleans Board of Trade and is one of the best known business men in the South. The company bought extensively in Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago and other cities.

No warrant has been issued for the arrest of the official alleged to be responsible for the failure of the firm, and he is reported to have left the city.

BEWARE OF THE SLANDERERS.

Beware of anonymous circulars! Charges made in the closing days of a campaign, verified by nobody, are unworthy of credence. They are cowardly attacks made too late for refutation, and are to be classed with the assassin who fires from ambush.

No man should allow himself to be influenced by accusations made anonymously, especially when the apparent object is to defeat candidates for office. The way to discourage campaign slanders, sent abroad without the backing of responsible authority, is to ignore them.

Turn the anonymous liar down by treating his slanders with contempt.

AN OFFER MADE TO CORBETT.

PURSE OF $10,000 FOR HIM TO MEET DENVER ED MARTIN.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—Thomas McCarey, manager of the Century Athletic Club, has written to James J. Corbett and to Billy Madden, manager for "Denver Ed" Martin, offering a purse of $10,000 for a meeting in this city, between the ex-champion and the negro heavyweight. The date of the meeting was left to the convenience of the two men and in case he succeeds in bringing about the meeting, Manager McCarey purposes that the winner meet Champion Jeffries in May of next year at the time of the annual fiesta. He promises that the purse for the later fight will equal that offered by the Century Club when it was trying for the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons fight. Madden has already expressed his willingness that Martin meet Corbett and the latter has taken the matter seriously enough to wire for assurance of McCarey's liability, which was readily forthcoming.

BIG MAJORITY FOR DR. PARDEE.

Citizens Say He Will Carry Alameda County by Majority of Between 5,000 and 8,000

Leading citizens, including an Ex-Chairman of the Democratic County Committee, estimate that Alameda county will give Dr. George C. Pardee from 5,000 to 8,000 majority. Here are their estimates:

C. H. BROSNAHAN, Democrat and former City Councilman—What do I think of Dr. Pardee's chances? I believe that he will win by at least 6,000 majority in Alameda county and it would not surprise me if they gave him a majority of 8,000. And now I will tell you why: The Democratic party in this county has whittled itself down until now we have only Jim McManus as the representative of the party on the county ticket. We have no active Democratic County Committee and no Democratic headquarters in a county of 100,000 people. If you want any Democratic literature you must go to John McDonald's office. It has been this way for the last two or three elections. We have no marching strength—no organization. I think twenty-five per cent of the young voters go to the Republicans in this county because there is where they find the red fire and enthusiasm.

Now for some figures: Let us take, first, the former city elections. In 1895 the Democrats put up for Mayor R. M. Fitzgerald, one of the most popular Democrats in the city. Fitzgerald received only 2,191 votes, which I believe was the party's strength. That year the total vote cast for Mayor was 8,330 votes. In 1901 another prominent and popular Democrat, Ex-Congressman Warren B. English, ran for Mayor and received only 981 votes. The total vote that year was 9,580. Those figures show that in six years the total vote was increased by 1,250 votes and in the same six years the Democratic vote decreased by 1,210. I am speaking now only of the city. In the county, for the last twenty-four years, there has been no change in the Republican majority except its pro rata increase with the increase of the population.

Regarding the Union Labor ticket, it is simply a branch of the Republicans. By electing it the best the Democrats could get would be the Public Administrator and Superintendent of Schools. In those two offices the only patronage is the one deputy allowed the School Superintendent. If the Democrats stand by their ticket the best they can get in the county is Jim McManus for Coroner, who will make a phenomenal run and Jack Collier, who, I think, will also make a great run for Constable, and a couple of Justices.

"I am going to vote for Dr. George C. Pardee, although I have absolutely nothing against Lane. Why am I, a Democrat, going to vote for Pardee? Well, I sat with him in the City Council, and I found him right. You know I went to the Council as a Democrat and we had only a small minority. I could get nothing without asking for Republican votes. If I wanted a crosswalk or a lamp post in my district or wanted to get one of my constituents on the street gang I had to apply to the Republican members. Dr. Pardee voted for anything I asked him to regardless of the fact that I belonged to another party. When I asked him to do a thing, he would look me in the eye and ask, 'Con, is it right?' and if I assured him it was he would vote for it. He was able, honest, and a courteous gentleman in the Council, treated his associates white and was of invaluable assistance to me when I wanted to secure something for my ward. I would be worse than an ingrate if I voted against him now. Dr. Pardee is a plain man; his wife is a plain woman. He is the friend of the laboring man and a thorough gentleman."

So, sizing the thing up with figures, I can see no reason why Dr. Pardee should not get a majority of 6,000, and, as I have said, it would not surprise me to see him get 8,000 majority.

CHARLES MAUTALEN, former chairman of the Republican County Central Committee—For several weeks I have been canvassing Alameda county and, after careful calculations, I place Dr. Pardee's majority in the county at 7,000. There are registered in the county 29,967 voters, and the vote cast, to be conservative, will be 23,000. The voting strength of the Union Labor party is 7,612. Of these laboring men, about 3,612 will vote for Dr. Pardee. That leaves then a working strength of 4,000. Give them those the votes of 1,000 disgruntled Republicans and they have 5,000. Give them the votes of 3,000 Democrats and they have 8,000. That is all the votes they could get under any circumstances, and that would leave Pardee with 7,000 majority.

JOHN ELLSWORTH, Superior Judge—Of course, I think Dr. Pardee will be elected Governor, and he will get a large majority in this county.

DR. C. L. TISDALE, of Alameda—There is no doubt that Dr. Pardee will win, both in the State and county. I think his majority in Alameda county will be about 5,000.

J. B. LANKTREE—I have looked the situation over carefully, and I think that Dr. Pardee will receive a majority of 6,000.

E. F. THAYER—I think, after hearing all the arguments of the opposition, that the Republican State ticket will win in Alameda county by a good majority. I would say, off-hand, that Pardee's majority will be near 5,000.

A. H. BREED, City Assessor and Assessor—I see no reason to change my estimate that I made when Dr. Pardee was nominated. At that time I said he would receive a majority of 5,000 votes, and I see no reason to change that estimate.

FRED M. CAMPBELL, secretary to Congressman Metcalf and former City Superintendent of Schools—I would place Dr. Pardee's majority in Alameda county at 2,500. That is the lowest estimate.

DR. H. N. ROWELL of Berkeley, Member of County Central Committee—I see no reason why Dr. Pardee

HUSBAND WREAKS AN AWFUL VENGEANCE.

HOUNDS TO DEATH AN ACTOR WHO STOLE HIS WIFE AND WRECKED HIS HOME —HIS AGENT IS THE MAILS.

The death of John J. Shaw, an actor at the Dewey Theater, has brought to light one of the most remarkable cases of vengeance wrecked in the history of human passions.

Actor Shaw wah literally hounded to death, it is claimed, by J. J. Spies, a New York theatrical agent, with whose wife he eloped two years ago.

The method employed by the outraged husband was as unique as it was satanic, and the actor slowly wasted away under the strain, until Saturday night he was carried from the theater, after the performance, to his deathbed. He died yesterday mornnig.

When Shaw left New York with Julia Edna Spies, wife of the theatrical agent, he came West, but although he and the woman secured employment in every city and town they visited, they could not hold an engagement because of Spies' vengeance, which he wrecked by sending the following circular to their employers:

"Office of J. J. Spies, Dramatic Agent and Theatrical Broker, 120 West Forty-second street, New York, N. Y.

The above cuts are as near as I can get them of my wife and his paramour, who carefully laid their plans while they were having their laisons and deceiving me. Its a good picture of the man, but a bad one of the woman: she's 'better looking. I ask you to carefully read all and act accordingly.

"No. 1—The woman (my wife), who with her paramour, Shaw, left her husband and her home. She is a tall, stately brunette, with gold in her front teeth and a small scare in her upper forehead. She has the name of Ann Sylvester, and lived with Shaw under the name of Hamilton in Los Angeles, Cal. She may change her name; in applying for employment she probably will.

"She is my lawful wife; she dare not marry.

"No. 2—The paramour, Shaw, whom I assisted professionally and personally for three years. He dined often at my house, and was an intimate visitor when I was away. Having discovered he was an outrageous liar, I ordered him out. He is five feet ten inches; dark; straight black hair; very dark agate eyes; lips and straight, even teeth, all indicative of a negro sixteenth; he has used the names of Hamilton and Hammersley, and may again. Here, by many, he is called "Nigger Shaw."

"The pair are now known as Mr. and Mrs. Shaw. They were for some weeks touring Southern California with the W. J. Elleford Company, and with him were known as J. W. Dennison and May Underhill.

"Said Elleford was notified personally in San Jose, Stockton and San Francisco, Cal., of the meritricious relationship of the two people he was harboring.

"He is not the J. J. Shaw from Ohio.

"He is now likely to be known as Shaw, Hammersley, Hamilton, or the last name, J. W. Dennison, or may change again.

"She is Ann Sylvester, Hamilton or May Underhill as occasion requires, or may change again.

"To believe the pair are now in Oakland, California.

"They will need assistance soon.

"If they apply to you—remeber

JAMES M'MANUS HAS MANY FRIENDS IN ALAMEDA COUNTY

The Democratic party has only one candidate for a county office this year, but that one is as popular as any man in the county and should poll his party's full strength.

James McManus is a pioneer of Oakland, where he counts his friends by the thousands, and he is almost as well and favorably known throughout the county as he is within the city limits. For years he has conducted funeral parlors at Seventh and Castro streets, and he is one of the substantial business men of the community. He has long been desirous of being the Coroner of Alameda county; not for personal gain, but because he desires the honor attached to the office and because he has in mind numerous reforms which, if elected, he will put in operation. He declares that, if he becomes the Coroner of Alameda county, the Coroner's office and his private business will be conducted separately, and he is in favor of a public Morgue.

As a citizen Mr. McManus needs no introduction to the people of Oakland, where he has lived for so many years. His genial disposition, smiling face and many acts of charity have endeared him to the hosts of people whom he calls his friends. He is an energetic worker and a man of sound judgment and could fill any executive office within the gift of the people capably and well. He has been a lifelong friend of the laboring man, having worked himself to the position he now holds in the community and he expects the support of the labor unions as a reward for his friendship and faithfulness to their cause.

As the only Democratic on the ticket Mr. McManus expects the Democrats, as well as his personal friends and the laboring men, to rally around to his standard on November 4th. McManus is known from Berkeley to the harbor, from Livermore to the bay, as a good fellow and his friends say his election is already assured.

LARGE DEED ON THE RECORD.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Nov. 1.—The largest trust deed ever filed with the County Recorder was placed on record when the Edison Electric Company of Evanston, Wyo., and Los Angeles, Cal., filed a deed of trust of all its franchises, pole lines, power houses, electric and power systems, which are located in nearly every county south of the Tehachapi. Among the items included is the power line between Santa Ana canyon and the city of Los Angeles, a distance of nearly sixty miles. The Edison Company deeds its property in trust to the Los Angeles Trust Company and the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York, in order to secure $10,000,000, necessary for the conduct of its business. It proposes to issue 10,000 $1,000 bonds, drawing five per cent interest and payable half yearly. The bonds become due September 1, 1922.

MRS. BOTKIN WILL MAKE FIGHT.

SHE HAS FILED A DEMURRER TO COMPLAINT OF HER HUSBAND.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—Mrs. Cordelia Botkin has filed a demurrer to her husband's suit for a divorce, alleging that a similar action is already pending. It seems that Botkin began a suit some years ago which never came to trial and never was dismissed. Mrs. Botkin is confined in the county jail for the alleged poisoning of Mrs. John P. Dunning of Denver, Col., by means of poisoned candy sent through the mails from this city.

A STRONG CANDIDATE

THOMAS SCOTT MAKING GREAT FIGHT FOR JUDGESHIP.

The friends of Thomas Scott the Labor party's nominee for Superior Judge are making a great fight, which promises success for their candidate on Tuesday night.

The nomination for this office came to Mr. Scott entirely unsolicited and it was with great difficulty that he was induced to run as his lucrative law practice occupies his entire time.

Mr. Scott is a native of Alameda county, being born at Niles in 1858, where he received his education in the public schools and Washington College at Irvington. In 1887 he was admitted to the bar before the Supreme Court in San Francisco. He was twice elected Justice of the Peace in Washington Township and four years ago carried this county for State Board of Equalization on the Democratic ticket, running ahead of his ticket by several thousand.

In this fight Mr. Scott not only has the support of the Labor party but is indorsed by the Democrats and among his supporters may be found many prominent Republicans who feel that he is the right man for the office.

THREATENED TO BURN THE HOUSE

Fearing that she would come home and burn the house down, as she had often threatened to do, Henry Griffin caused the arrest of his wife, Margaret Griffin, last night on a charge of drunkenness.

To the authorities at the City Prison yesterday afternoon the husband said his wife was about town under the influence of liquor and with $100 in gold coin on her person. She would not come home until the money was squandered, the husband said, and when in her cups she announced that she was going to burn the house down. The patrolmen were instructed to be on the lookout for the woman, and late last night she was found by Officer Hynes wandering the streets in West Oakland. The patrol wagon was summoned and the woman taken to the City Prison, where search failed to reveal the $80 that the husband stated was on her person. In the Police Court this morning she pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness and was sentenced to pay a fine of $6 or serve three days in the City Prison.

SCORES OF LIVES ARE IN DANGER

JOLIET, Ill., Nov. 1.—Scores of lives were put in danger this morning through a head-on collision on the Rock Island road. Two loaded passenger trains came together because of a misplaced switch, and both engines and two baggage cars were badly damaged.

The engine crews jumped in time to save their lives. No one was hurt.

DIES WHILE IN HIS ARMCHAIR

AGED JOHN WESTLEY EASTER PASSED PEACEFULLY AWAY LAST NIGHT.

While resting in his arm chair, after eating his evening meal, John Westley Easter, a retired merchant, passed away shortly after 8 o'clock last night at his residence, 569 Twenty-seventh street. His demise was discovered soon after by his daughter Nettie, who summoned a physician, but her father was beyond medical aid. The cause of death is a mystery, as the deceased was not in ill health, but on the contrary had been in the best of health. So far as his family know he was not troubled with heart disease.

LAST RALLY OF REPUBLICANS

The final Republican rally of the campaign will be held at the Exposition Building Monday evening, and elaborate preparations for the affair are being made by the Republican County Central Committee.

The principal speaker will be S. M. Shortridge, and other eloquent orators will make addresses. Seats will be reserved for women and their escorts.

Before the meeting there will be a parade through the principal streets, the Republican Alliance and Young Men's Republican Club acting as escorts to the speakers. Brass bands, red fire and rockets will form no small part in the demonstration.

BODY FOUND

The body of an unknown man, about 60 years of age, was found floating in the estuary by J. Betterry and George Le Perle this afternoon. The body was that of a laborer.

GUADALUPE ALVISO MAKES A STATEMENT.

Editor TRIBUNE: In your esteemed paper yesterday, in your report of court proceedings, it is made to appear that I, as my own lawyer, am a bad actor. Your reporter made grave mistakes.

First—The case is not taken under advisement by Hon. Judge Ellsworth, but simply continued for two weeks for further trial.

Second—My first witness was not accepted because I neglected to subpoena the telegraph company and the Honorable Judge did not accept secondary evidence, as he knows his business.

Third—Valentine Alviso, as executor, was not discharged.

After my proofs are presented, that may be decided. There is some difference between a "distribution" and a "discharge." The fact that at the last moment yesterday Valentine Alviso's lawyer challenged the jurisdiction of Judge Ellsworth and tried to drive me to the City of Mexico to prove my rights ought to be enough to prove to my friends that I am making no imaginary claim, but seeking only justice and truth, from which no honest man need to try to carry from our honored courts into Mexico.

Respectfully,

JOSE GUADALPE ALVISO.

MORGAN HAS A BIG DEAL.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 1.—J. Pierpont Morgan and party arrived here today from Chicago and were driven to the residence of Ralph W. Hickox. Later Senator Hanna visited the Hickox residence and held a long conference with Mr. Morgan and his associates.

Mr. Hanna declined to discuss his interview with Mr. Morgan. He added, however, that the latter was simply in the West on a railroad inspection tour.

The Evening Pfaindealer today will say: A report which could not be verified, was in circulation today that Mr. Morgan's visit to both Chicago and Cleveland was in connection with the proposed combination of all the limits, South and East. Notice of sale was prepared and approved, but after bids were opened it was found that this notice had been tampered with prior to publication. Greater freighting privileges than contemplated were granted and in addition, the franchise provided for third rails. After competitive bidding for the privilege had been allowed twice, the franchise was awarded the Pacific Electric Railway by the Council, and promptly vetoed by the Mayor. It is probable that the case will be taken to the higher courts.

HAD A RIGHT TO PROTECT HOME

SAN JOSE, Nov. 1.—O. G. Johnson, who shot Des Gillis last night, because the latter attempted ot force an entrance into Johnson's house where Mrs. Johnson was sole occupant, was today discharged from custody on direction of the District Attorney, who believes that no crime has been committed.

OLD MUSICIAN DIES OF INJURIES

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—Geo. Seekamp, the oldest professional musician in San Francisco, died at his home last night from a fracture of the skull received some days ago in a street car accident. He was for many years a member of the Park Band. Notwithstanding his advanced age he was strong and hearty at the age of 70.

PHELAN STANDS BY THE STATE.

HE HAS SOMETHING TO SAY ABOUT THE BUBONIC PLAGUE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The widely-circulated reports of the existence of the bubonic plague at San Francisco have brought former Mayor Phelan to the rescue of the reputation of his native city. In a letter to the Daily Telegraph, Mr. Phelan contends that San Francisco is perhaps the healthiest city in the world, and that in spite of its being a resort for invalids, its death rate ranks with the lowest. He declares the plague diagnosis in San Francisco is disputed and that whatever disease it may be, it is evidently non-infectious, as the mortality in Chinatown has not increased, nor has any white person living near Chinatown contracted the complaint.

A BIG MAJORITY FOR PARDEE.

should not receive a majority of 7,000. That is my estimate of his strength in Alameda county.

DR. O. D. HAMLIN—Dr. Pardee, as nearly as I can figure it out, will receive a majority of 5,000.

LOUIS SCHAFER, President of the City Council—I would say, as a rough estimate, that Dr. Pardee will win with a majority of about 5,000.

J. S. EMERY of Emeryville—I think that Dr. Pardee's majority in Alameda county will be about 6,500.

DR. FRANK R. WOOLSEY of Berkeley—Dr. Pardee's majority in Alameda county will be about 6,000.

CLARENCE CROWELL, Chairman of the Republican County Central Committee—A conservative estimate of Pardee's majority in Alameda county would be 5,000.

GEORGE S. PIERCE, Secretary Republican County Central Committee—Pardee's majority in the county will be 5,500.

ALEX HIRSHBERG, cigar dealer—A conservative estimate would be 4,000 majority for Pardee in Alameda county, but I think it will be more than that.

MAX MARCUSE, attorney and auctioneer—Pardee's majority in Alameda county will be 8,000.

ALBERT BROWN, funeral director—I estimate Pardee's majority at 5,000 at the lowest figure.

FRED OSGOOD, druggist—I think Pardee will win by at least 5,000 majority.

L. W. HARDY, politician—Pardee's majority will be between 7,000 and 8,000.

GEORGE SAMUELS, Chief Deputy District Attorney—I would place Pardee's majority at between 5,000 and 6,000.

DR. D. D. CROWLEY—Pardee's majority in Alameda county will be 5,000.

M. KELLY, politician—Pardee's majority in Alameda county, 5,000.

ABE P. LEACH, Prosecuting Attorney—Pardee's majority in Alameda county, 5,500.

J. J. WARNER—The lowest estimate would be 5,000.

WILLIAM RUTHERFORD of the California Cotton Mills—Pardee's majority in Alameda county will be 8,000, and I consider that a conservative estimate.

M. K. MILLER, former Superintendent of Streets—Pardee's majority in the county will be between 4,000 and 5,000 votes.

FRED KAHN, merchant—Pardee's majority in the county will be 4,500.

MORRIS ISAACS, merchant—Pardee's majority in the county, 6,000.

D. C. BROWN, JR., merchant—Pardee will win by 5,000 majority in this county.

MORTIMER SMITH, Police Judge—I think Pardee's majority in the county will be between 5,000 and 6,000.

F. N. WYCKOFF, Republican County Central Committeeman—Pardee's majority in the county will be 5,000.

W. R. POND, Berkeley—Pardee will get 6,500.

DR. GLADDING, Berkeley—Pardee will get between 5,000 and 6,000 majority.

CONGRESSMAN VICTOR H. METCALF—I estimate that Dr. Pardee will receive about 5,000 majority from the voters of Alameda county.

GUY C. EARL, attorney—Pardee will receive between 5,000 and 6,000 majority from this county. The voters should get up vim enough to make it many thousand more.

E. H. WOOLSEY, physician—Pardee will win in this county. I figure his majority to be about 5,000 votes.

HENRY ABRAHAMSON of Abrahamson Bros., merchants—Pardee will be the winner in Alameda county by about 6,000 votes and I have no fear.

SOL KAHN of Kahn Bros., merchants—About 5,500 is what I estimate Pardee will receive as a majority in this county. I am not a prophet or the son of a prophet, but he will certainly carry this county.

H. C. CAPWELL, merchant—I can't give you my estimate in figures, but Pardee will receive a very handsome majority from this county to carry him on to success.

WILLIAM F. DELANEY—About 5,500 will be the majority given Pardee by the people of Alameda county. He is a sure winner.

LARUE CHOICE OF BROOKLYN.

FRIENDS WORKING HARD TO RETURN HIM TO OFFICE.

One of the most interesting contests in the coming election is the one being made by the friends of James Larue, the Union Labor candidate for Justice of the Peace of Brooklyn Township.

Mr. Larue has also the indorsement of the Independent Republican party, of which he has been a staunch member since he cast his first vote in this Township, for Abraham Lincoln for President.

He has the entire confidence, esteem, and support of all the older representative citizens as well as of all the younger people with whom he has an extensive acquaintance.

He has had ample experience, having served as Justice of the Peace in this Township for six years and has arrived at such an age as will enable him to judge fairly, impartially and without bias on such matters as may come before him.

If age, ability, integrity and experience are desirable qualifications for a candidate for Justice of the Peace, James Larue possesses them in an eminent degree.

His friends are making a clean and dignified canvass in his behalf and are fully assured that success will crown their efforts.

COUNTRY DISTRICTS WANT SUPERINTENDENT

CLAIM HEAD OF COUNTY SCHOOL DEPARTMENT SHOULD NOT BE A CITY MAN.

The citizens of the Forty-Sixth Assembly District request that the office of County Superintendent of Schools be given to the country portion of the county. The request seems a most just one.

The duties of the office have to do almost exclusively with the administration of the affairs of the country schools. The schools of the cities of Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley are each under the control of a City Superintendent and Board of Education and the people of the remaining portion of the county feel that it is only justice that they should have in charge one who is especially identified with the schools.

In the person of Harry W. Lynch they have named a man whose whole life has been devoted to the interests of the country schools, and the citizens of our city will be rendering an act of justice in supporting him on election day.

Mr. Lynch's father gave the best years of his life to the schools of this county and the son is in every way qualified for the position for which the Republicans have named him.

Candidate For Clerk of the Supreme Court Has Just Completed a Stenuous Campaign Trip.

(From S. F. Call, Oct. 31.)

Frank C. Jordan, Republican nominee for Clerk of the Supreme Court, has just completed a most remarkable campaign trip. He traveled many hundred miles over mountain trails and through districts where State candidates heretofore have feared to tread carrying the banner of Pardee and the Republican ticket. Regarding his trip Mr. Jordan said:

"I left for Eureka on the steamer Pomona Sunday, September 14th, accompanied by my mascot, 'Colonel' Cuddy 'of California.' As the steamer pulled out into the stream Roncovieri's Band surprised me by playing 'One More River to Cross.' The boys of the Press Club who came down to the wharf to see me off were responsible for this serenade. The trip up was very pleasant. The ocean was as smooth as the bay, much to my disappointment, too, as I wanted the 'Colonel' to enjoy a little seasickness, he never having been to sea before and having no knowledge of the sensations accompanying such an attack.

"We reached Eureka Monday morning, and I immediately commenced passing my hand to the good people of that bustling town. I met nearly every one there that day and got hold of the hands of a few voters living in Del Norte, down for a visit to the fair then being held. Tuesday I was up and on the wharves and in the sawmills at 7 o'clock, giving my constituents a chance to meet me and also learning a little about the great lumber business of Humboldt county.

"At 9 o'clock, engaging the best team I could secure, in company with George T. Rolley, Republican nominee for the Assembly; Walter F. Price, Revenue Collector, and my genial mascot, I drove to Fortuna, thence to Ferndale and over to Alton by way of Waddington and Grizzly Bluff.

"Getting supper at Alton, we started on our long drive to Eureka, visiting Loleta on the way, reaching Eureka at midnight, having in the one day covered eighty-two miles. I met several hundred men and thoroughly placarded the towns with Pardee and Jordan cards.

"Wednesday found me on the wharves at 7 o'clock and during the forenoon I campaigned with a will. At 2 o'clock I was on train, bound for Arcata. I was very kindly received at Arcata and was assured that my 'prosperity' checks had made me well known.

"Before leaving Eureka I had decided to go overland on horseback through Humboldt and Siskiyou counties, by way of Orleans Bar and Hoopa Indian Reservation to Yreka, as I thought time could be saved. I engaged a guide, two saddle horses and a pack horse for the trip. Thursday night at eight o'clock found us at Redwood, some forty miles from Arcata, having during the day visited Blue Lakes and from that town driven twenty miles over a range of mountains. I met a good many voters on the way and took advantage of every opportunity.

TRAVEL IN THE STORM.

"Thursday morning it began to rain hard. Rubber suits used by the ranch hands were put on and soon we were off on our hard trip. The 'Colonel' having never been on horseback before, soon became restless and uneasy. Night found us at China Flat on the Trinity River and the 'Colonel' repairing the injuries of the day by a liberal application of hammamelis. Here we met Geo. McGillivray, formerly of Oakland, and he advised me to go up the Trinity over the old mail trail instead of taking the Orleans Bar route, warning us of the danger of being snowed in on the Siskiyou Mountains. As the distance was somewhat less to ride the 'Colonel' did not object to the change of route. Trouble was on my mascot's mind though when told that South Fork, to be crossed the next day, was 300 feet wide and forty feet deep and that there was neither boat nor bridge.

"When told that his horse was to be driven into the stream and he was to cling to his tail he turned pale and said 'Boss, I can't do that; I don't like water nohow, and supposin' I'd get drowned, why the folks down home would say I was nutty.'

"We finally hit upon the scheme of knocking the bottom out of a sugar barrel, tying the 'Colonel' on and pulling him across with ropes. The 'Colonel' concluded 'that was the real dope,' and went to bed happy. His first inquiry upon being awakened at daylight was as to the barrel, and, upon reaching South Fork at noon he discovered the stream to be only a foot deep. The 'Colonel' was himself again.

"Here we rested and a light fishing rod soon landed eighty fine trout. A late start, due to the allurements of the stream, was made for Burnt Ranch, the only place we could make that day. Where we had rested the hills were high, but before we got over the range that night we looked down on them. Darkness came soon. The guide ahead found it extremely difficult to keep the trail, frequent halts had to be made and matches were struck often. Up and up we climbed and we soon began to appreciate the task we had undertaken. The 'Colonel,' born in Frisco, never away from home farther than Sacramento, Stockton or San Jose, in a burst of confidence said: 'Boss, I didn't know the world was so big.' I instantly cautioned him to be quiet, asking him if he had not heard strange noises in the timber as we rode along. He said he had and I said, "'Colonel,' these mountains are alive with panthers and California lions (and they are.) There are several bounding along on each side of our trail, keeping about twenty feet away from us, and an outcry might cause them to attack us.' 'My! boss; I don't like this,' was his feeble reply.

"On the summit at last, a moment for rest gave us an opportunity to look around. The moon, kind to us at last, lighted up the way and mountain, cliff and canyon stood out in bold relief. High as the mountain we were on was, others towered above and around us. It was a scene I will not soon forget. Down the mountain we went without incident other than to be startled once by the 'Colonel' crying out far behind us on the trail, 'Boss, don't go so fast. I'm afraid of these lions.'

RECEIVE WARM WELCOME.

"At Burnt Ranch we received a mountaineer's welcome. A good sleep and good meals put us all in good spirits and our refreshed horses soon took us to the Trinity. Then along the river, over trails that needed cautious riding—for a stumble or false step would hurl horse and rider into the river, hundreds of feet below—we went. Over the great slide that rushed one stormy night into the river, burying in its fearful course several unfortunate Chinamen and completely damming the river till its water rose to a depth of three hundred feet, we rode uneasily, and at noon, after fording the stream, we lunched on the spot where poor Van Arman, the mail carrier, crawled after being mortally hurt and died, leaving a hastily scribbled note telling of an Indian attack and the death of his soldier escort.

"That day, Sunday, we had a long and dangerous ride, particularly so at Don Juan Point, where the 'Colonel,' grasping the horn of his saddle, gave his horse loose rein and concluded that life was hardly worth living. Noon found us at Big Flat, a familiar spot to all pioneers. In 1851 this place was a scene of rustling activity, now in ruins. Fifty years ago thousands of miners went there for supplies and pack trains took in for winter use more than $50,000 worth of provisions. It was then a place where candidates sought the votes of hundreds, now a spot only of interest to a lone candidate because of its solitude.

"Before long my camera hid on its dark roll a picture I value—a picture showing an old man bent with years and feebly toiling up a steep trail with pick and pan.

"Overtaking him we stopped. Hard of hearing, he yet was able to learn the reason of my journey and startled me by telling me of his presence on the river in the days of '51; of the prosperity, excitement, rush of those early days; of the stampede on new and faraway diggings; of his own temporary desertion of the river and quest pursued here year after year for the yellow metal—a quest still kept up, lonely, disheartening, but yet not hopeless.

"That night we rested at Cox's Bar, having passed Big Bar, so wondrously rich. Kindly treated, well fed, at break of day we bade good-bye to our kind host, Mr. Tinsley, and, fording the Trinity again, made for North Fork, where the wagon road to Weaverville promised an easier and more satisfactory trail.

"Even over this part of our trail the 'Colonel' several times was seen to redden, flush and shut his eyes because the river far below did not 'look good to him.'

"Early in the afternoon we made North Fork, and here, in the shade of a great apple tree, planted in '49, fresh cider cheered us and the 'Colonel' was happy again.

"Here he tumbled from his horse and said, 'Boss, I wouldn't do it again for a million.' A seat on the stage was engaged for the 'Colonel' and with my guide I galloped away toward Weaverville, eighteen miles distant, taking in Junction City and the great La Grange Mines.

"That night at Weaverville was a happy one. I was kindly greeted by friends, all of whom assured me that my rough trip, the first made by a candidate of any party on the regular ticket, would not go unrewarded. The next night found us at Redding, after a fifty-mile stage ride, mascot and vote-seeker, both weary and gray with dust, but happy, hearty and eagerly anxious for supper."

A. K. GRIM TELLS OF HIS WORK.

Says He Has Conducted County Recorder's Office on Strictly Business Principles.

Office of County Recorder,
Oakland, October, 1902.

To the Voters of Alameda County:—

I desire to thank you through the medium of the press for the very gratifying vote you honored me with four years ago.

It would afford me great pleasure to visit you personally at this time, but the duties of my office make it impossible to do so.

I have conducted the Recorder's office on strictly business principles, regardless of politics, requiring of my employes but two qualifications: Efficiency and good penmanship. By making some economical changes and close application to expenses I have been able to pay into the County Treasury Sixteen Thousand Two Hundred and Ninety-four 42-100 Dollars over and above all salaries and wages in the forty-five months just past, being more than was paid into the treasury in any consecutive forty-five months in the history of the office.

There are employed in the Recorder's office directly under my charge, sixteen men and four women. Each of the women support their respective families. Other women in the office are employes of the Searchers of Records and have nothing to do with the Recorder's office proper.

I present my name to you on the Union Labor ticket for re-election, and trust that my record since my induction into office will warant you in giving me your vote and support.

With best wishes for your prosperity, I remain.

Yours very truly,
A. K. GRIM,
County Recorder.

WORK DONE BY THE PROHIBITIONISTS

Editor TRIBUNE:—Reports from the meetings of Theo. D. Kanouse in Southern California made the Prohibitionists fel very jubilant over the prospect of a greatly increased vote next Tuesday.

At Pasadena, where the Prohibitionists out voted the Democrats at the primaries, the largest hall in town was crowded to the doors, and at Whittier the Prohibitionists held the largest political rally of the campaign, the big tent used for the occasion being unable to accommodate the hundreds who came out to hear the third party advocate. Similar meetings were held at Pomona and Long Beach. The trip will finish at Glendale, the candidate's town town.

J. M. Glass has been addressing good audiences in Santa Cruz and Santa Clara counties, and Mrs. Tongier is campaigning in San Joaquin valley.

The Prohibition platform this year is a very popular one among the temperance people and is being widely circulated by them. Nineteen thousand copies of it were sent out from State headquarters, and demands for it are coming in from all over the State. The party workers claim that it is the best platform the party has ever issued.

Cheering news came from the East for the Prohibitionists, where nominations have been made in twenty-one States. In many places the chances for the election of Prohibition candidates is very favorable, indeed. Oliver W. Stewart, the national chairman, has been nominated for the Legislature in Chicago, and an unusually vigorous campaign is being made in his behalf, with good prospects of election. James Mansel, who has been endorsed by the Democrats in Pennsylvania, has a reasonable prospect of being elected to Congress in that State. Mansel was twice elected Mayor of Williamsford, on the Prohibition ticket. Dr. Swallow is the candidate for Governor and is keeping up his reputation as a fighting parson.

The Prohibitionists have nearly recovered the ground lost in 1896, and expect to begin to elect candidates to office from now on. In this State, open headquarters will be maintained throughout the year and organization and agitation will be pressed with vigor.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the torture of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies today that relieve but do not cure. Here is evidence to prove that Doan's Kidney Pills cure, and the cure is lasting.

E. M. Fraser, with the Harbor Commission, residence 2220 Dupont avenue, Berkeley, says: "If I had not been positively certain that Doan's Kidney Pills were doing me good I never would have returned to the Owl Drug Co.'s store and bought a second box. The dull aching in my back was just the common ordinary form of pain in and around the kidneys, never severe enough to lay a man up, but recurring at intervals frequent enough and annoying enough to cause considerable discomfort. Doan's Kidney Pills positively stopped the last attack and since then I have made more than one of my friends and acquaintances aware of this fact, for I think a remedy which can be depended upon should be known to everybody."

BERKELEY and STATE UNIVERSITY

Berkeley Coeds Entertain Mrs. Hearst at Luncheon. | Agricultural College Issues Bulletin on Peachworm. | Nevada Team Arrives and Meets 'Varsity This Afternoon.

BRANCH OFFICE, 2121 STANFORD PLACE TELEPHONE MASON 1761

BERKELEY, Nov. 1.—As the result of the work of Assistant Entymologist Warren T. Clarke, of the University of California Agricultural College, that department issued yesterday a valuable bulletin on "The Peach Worm."

Last summer Mr. Clarke made some extensive investigations in Placer county. With Newcastle as his headquarters, he visited all of the orchards in the adjoining county, studying the habits of the peach worm that had worked such havoc to the peaches of that vicinity. He found that it did no good to wash or spray the trunks of the trees, as the worm did not work its way up the tree as some worms do. Nor did the spraying that most of the farmers did do much good. This was due to the fact that the spraying was done at the wrong time.

Entymologist Clarke studied carefully the habits of the insect. He found that the moth crept into the recesses of the bark of the tree and deposited its egg. These eggs give birth to the destroying worm. And, as the eggs were not affected by spraying, the problem became, when do the eggs hatch?

To ascertain this, Mr. Clarke carried some of the twigs, upon which the eggs were, about with him next to his body. The heat of his body hatched them in about three days.

Acting upon this discovery, Clarke advised the farmers to spray shortly after the first warm weather. Those who took his advice saved, practically, their entire crop. The preceding year about sixty per cent of the peach crop was lost. This year those who took Entymologist Clarke's advice lost less than one per cent.

The pamphlet, which is written by Mr. Clarke himself, is sandsomely gotten up, with many interesting cuts.

VALUABLE TREATISE ON PHILOSOPHY PUBLISHED

BERKELEY, Nov. 1.—The second volume of the Dictionary of Philosophy and Psychology, edited by J. Mark Baldwin, professor of Psychology in Princeton University, who was a member of the faculty of the last summer session of the University of California, has just come from the press of the Macmillan Company. President Benjamin Ide Wheler is the author of all the philological articles in the volume. He has covered the fields of comparative grammar, phonetics, and the general science of language. Among his contributions to this second volume are the articles on philology, phonetics and phonetic laws. Among other contributors to the dictionary are Josiah Royce, '75, one of the most distinguished graduates of the university, a member of the faculty of the last summer season, and professor of the History of Philosophy in Harvard University, and Edmund Clark Sanford, professor of psychology in Clark University, and a member of the faculty of the summer season of 1901.

THIRD ANNUAL GAME OF CALIFORNIA AND NEVADA

BERKELEY, Nov. 1.—This afternoon on the Berkeley campus, the University of Nevada football team met the eleven of the University of California. This was the third annual game between the two universities. Up to three years ago California's second eleven used to go to Nevada to play the sage-brush team. But Nevada played such good and gritty ball that she was deemed worthy of the steel of the best California could produce. Three years ago Nevada met and defeated Stanford by a score of 6-0, and was defeated by Berkeley, 30-0. Last year they were defeated by Stanford, and in a hard-fought game allowed California to score only twelve points. On Saturday last Standford defeated Nevada 11-5, but put up a much better game than the score indicates.

At center for Nevada was Smith. In last Saturday's game, he entirely out-classed Lee of Stanford, often smashing things up and spoiling the passing of Quarter-back Barnsbach. O'Hara at left end played a beautiful game, tackling hard, getting into the interference well, and running down under punts in perfect form. Left-half Freezell out-punted Magee of Stanford. At the time of this writing, the teams have not lined up; what these men will do against the California men is a matter of much interest.

For California Hudson and Demerrit will play ends. Hudson is playing better this year than ever before, while Demerrit takes good care of his end of the line. Heitmuller seems to have won his place at tackle. He is a strong, conscientious player and is proving a surprise by his excellent work. Captain Albertson, the other tackle, is as reliable as ever. Though he has had to devote much of his time to the other players, he is rapidly rounding into his perfect form of last year. As guards Overall and Stow are the strongest places in the team. Stroud and Phillips both play good games at center, thought the latter has the advantage in weight. Moore has returned to his position at quarter, and, except a tendency to fumble, is putting up good ball.

Smith and Mini as halves play well together, the former as a line bucker and the latter at running ends and "crawling" through holes. Whipple is playing a steady game at full. Risley and White are doing good work at half, and "Bobby" Sherman makes an excellent showing every time he gets into the game.

Yesterday morning the Nevada team arrived at Sixteenth-street depot, where they were met by Manager Ezra Decoto of California and several Berkeley men. For a short time they went through signals on the Berkeley field, to get limbered up.

This afternoon the teams lined up as follows:

California.	Nevada.
Hudson	R E L O'Hara
Heitmuller	R T L A. Steckle
Overall	R G L McElroy
Stroud	C Mellin
Stow	L G R C. Smith
Albertson	L T R Reardon

COACH SECURED FOR THE JUNIOR FARCE.

BERKELEY, Nov. 1.—Arrangements have been made the Junion Farce Committee to have Mr. Leon Cooper of the Alcazar Theater, San Francisco, coach the students in their rehearsals for the Junior day farce and curtain raiser. The casts for these have been selected provisionally, but will not be announced until after a few rehearsals. Last night the casts met for the first time at the Kappa Sigma Fraternity House.

Junior day will be celebrated on November 28th. The farce may be given at a San Francisco theater, as the Macdonough Theater, Oakland, where they have been presented in the past, is too small. In the evening the class will hold its prom in the gymnasium.

MRS. PHOEBE HEARST THE GUEST OF WOMEN STUDENTS.

BERKELEY, Nov. 1.—In the girls' gymnasium, which she, herself gave to the University of California, Mrs. Hearst was entertained yesterday by the women students of Berkeley. At 11 o'clock Mrs. Hearst attended the gymnasium work of the special class of upper class girls. At noon a concert was given by the University of California Glee Club, who gave several selections. H. W. Baldwin sang a bass solo; Mr. M. Thompson gave a violincello solo and Mr. Burban entertained the company with his delightful whistling. After the concert, an informal reception was held, when all the young ladies met the guest of honor. Following this was the luncheon. The tables were arranged in the form of a large T, and covers were laid for thirty-two. On the tables were large pumpkins in honor of the day—Hallowe'en. These pumpkins were scooped out and used as vases for enormous bunches of beautiful chrysanthemums. On the plate cards little pumpkins were drawn. All the decorations were in yellow, and on the table were scattered autumn leaves. After luncheon Mrs. Hearst witnessed the bastket ball game and the Freshman gymnasium practice.

With Mrs. Hearst the guests of honor were Mrs. Wheeler, Mrs. John Galen Howard, Prof. Cory, Prof. and Mrs. Magee and Mrs. Walter Waterman.

The basket ball game was between the Freshmen and Seniors against the Junior and Sophmores, and was won by the latter by the score of 3 to 2. Following is the line-up of the team:

Juniors and Sophmores—(Goals): Misses Le Conte, Regney, Heger, Reichenbach, Noon, Ebi, Talcott; Guards—Misses Magneson, Shafter, Spencer (captain); Center — Misses Ward, Boynton, White, Cohn.

A physician was immediately called, who dressed the injured member. The child will recover shortly.

THROW STONES AT WASH HOUSE AND ARE ARRESTED.

BERKELEY, Nov. 1.—A. Hill and G. Hartkap, two boys who amused themselves by throwing stones at a Chinese wash house on Dwight Way, were arrested yesterday for the offense by Deputy Marshal Howard. They were released on their own recognizance and arraigned to appear before Judge Edgar next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

PLEASANT EVENING AT THE Y. M. C. A. HALL

There was a very interesting Hallowe'en party at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last night.

Contrary to the usual custom the refreshments were served in the fore part of the evening. Covers had been spread in the Board of Trade rooms, which open into the main auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. Building and here the guests crowded and enjoyed their fill of dainty viands.

The refreshments room, and also the parlors and reception rooms were uniquely and artistically decorated, pumpkin lanterns, both real and artificial, being grotesquely placed amongst bowers of evergrens and potted plants.

The evening's program included physical work in the gymnasium and a splendid program of musical and literary numbers, rendered in the main auditorium. In the gymnasium there was a comic boxing bout, and Indian club race, an obstacle race, a shuffle board, bowling and handball games.

Joseph Bossert, the clever impersonator, was the star entertainer in the auditorium. He gave comic and tragic impersonations in grotesque costumes, as occasion required, and gained the plaudits of the audience by his clever work. One of the cleverest performances given by Mr. Bossert was the presentation of the comedy "The Up-to-date Doctor." Six characters take part in the play, and Mr. Bossert took each part, appearing first as Dr. Jones, then as Heinrich, the office boy, as an old maid, as a peddler, a tramp and as an impersonator. He recited "Rospierre's Victim" and "The Miser." He also gave selections from "The Wandering Jew," and pictured with great skill the duel character of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." His performance throughout was a meritious one.

Music was furnished throughout the evening by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra.

OVERLOOKED.

THERE ARE PATENT MEDICINES AND REMEDIES WITHOUT NUMBER.

For Every Disease and Affliction But One.

A prominent physician was recently asked why it was that there are so many "blood purifiers," "nerve tonics" and remedies for every ill, except one of the most common and annoying, viz, piles. He replied, there are two principal reasons. First, physicians and people in general, have thought that the only permanent cure for piles was a surgical operation, that medicinal preparations were simply palliative. Another reason is, that piles is in no sense of the word an imaginary disease; the sufferer from piles is very much aware of the fact, and for this reason, the few so-called pile salves, ointments, etc., have been short-lived. The patient very soon discovered their inefficiency.

He says further fortunately, however, there is a new remedy for piles, which judging from its rapidly growing popularity, will soon take the place of all other treatment; it has certainly made astonishing cures in this obstinate disease and its merit has made it famous among physicians and wherever it has been introduced. This remedy is sold by all druggists under the name of Pyramid Pile Cure.

From the immediate relief which the Pyramid Pile Cure gives in all forms of piles, many physicians supposed it contained opium, cocaine or some similar substance, but upon analysis it was found to be perfectly free from anything of the kind, and that the instant relief and cure which follows its use is rather the result of its remarkable healing, soothing action on the parts affected.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is the only remedy, except a surgical operation, which immediately relieves and permanently cures every form of piles.

It is sold by druggists at 50 cents and $1, or by mail from Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich.

OAKLAND TRIBUNE
Tribune Publishing Company William E. Dargie, President

A GOOD AMENDMENT.

Senate Constitutional Amendment No. 3 should be adopted. It provides as follows

"Section 1¾. All bonds hereafter issued by the State of California, or by any county, city and county, municipal corporation or district (including school, reclamation and irrigation districts) within said State, shall be free and exempt from taxation."

The effect of this amendment will be to enable cities, counties and school districts to borrow money at lower rates of interest than are now paid. It also removes a discrimination against the savings banks and trust companies of this State. Under the present law the banks of other States can underbid California banks in the purchase of county, municipal and school district bonds.

If a bond of the city of Oakland, for instance, is sold outside the State it is not taxed, but if sold to a citizen of California it is subject to taxation. In consequence practically all the public bonds issued in California are sold abroad because local capitalists cannot afford to buy them. Thus local capital is discriminated against, and the State receives no revenue from an absurd provision of the Constitution requiring public obligations to be taxed as property. No individual would assume that the notes he had given for money he had borrowed represented an addition to his assets. Yet that is precisely the position the State is placed in by the Constitution. Any business man who has to borrow money from time to time to carry on his business knows that a law or rule which operates to increase his interest rate works to his injury. Taxing bonds representing public debt operates to keep up the rate of interest. In California municipalities and counties would have to pay higher rates of interest than they do now but for the fact that investors living in States where they are non-taxable stand ready to buy them. For this reason the taxing clause of the Constitution fails of its object, which is to raise revenue, and discriminates against home capital in favor of foreign investors.

More than twenty years' trial of the present system has proved its futility and its evil policy. It should be abolished, and the way to do it is to vote for Amendment No. 3.

THE JUDICIAL CANDIDATES.

There should be no necessity for offering voters advice as to who should be elected Superior Judges. Every thoughtful, intelligent citizen ought to see the propriety and public policy of voting to re-elect the three judges now sitting on the bench. All things being equal, they should be kept where they are. It is not wise to displace good judges for no adequate or just cause.

Not the slightest tangible reason has been advanced for replacing Judges Hall, Greene and Melvin with others. The character and learning cannot be improved by doing so. Indeed no discriminating citizen can expect the three judges named to be improved upon.

The only reason thus far given for displacing them is the story circulated from mouth to mouth that Judges Hall, Greene and Melvin shirked out of trying the water case. A plain recital of the facts will dispose of this silly calumny. The suit of the Contra Costa Water Company against the City of Oakland was filed in April, 1900. It was set for trial on the 6th of May, 1900, and on the 9th of June, 1900, Judge Hart first sat in the case to hear argument on demurrer. Various motions delayed the trial till October 1900, when the case was adjudicated.

Judge Melvin's commission was signed on the 14th of March, 1901, some time after a decision had been rendered. He did not go on the bench till nearly a year after the suit had been filed.

Judge Hall was legally disqualified from sitting in the case for two reasons. His brother-in-law, A. A. Moore, was one of the attorneys for the plaintiff and the law forbids a judge hearing that relation to an attorney in a case to hear the cause. Besides Judge Hall is a rate-payer, and was disqualified as an interested party.

Judge Greene was also disqualified by reason of being a rate-payer. The case was filed in Judge Ogden's court, and after a consultation the judges decided that under the rule laid down by the Supreme Court a rate-payer could not legally sit in such an action. Judge Ogden was also a rate-payer, and therefore disqualified.

The whole charge falls to the ground because one of the judges was not on the bench at the time while the other two could not try the case under the law. Any other stories derogatory to the judicial record of either of the three judges will be found, on investigation, to be fully as baseless and silly. Vote for Judges Hall, Greene and Melvin because they have honored the bench.

The voters should remember that Os- Rogers has made an excellent ff, and that he is a candidate for tion.

MAKE THE MAJORITY LARGE.

It is reasonably certain that Doctor George C. Pardee will be elected Governor next Tuesday by a handsome majority. This is indicated by reports from all over the State showing that the Republican standard bearer is in high favor with the solid elements of society. His campaign in San Francisco has been received with such marked favor that strong hopes are now entertained that he will carry that city. This change of sentiment is largely due to the influence of the thoughtful and conservative men belonging to the labor unions, who realize that the election of Pardee would be the best thing that could happen for the cause of organized labor at this time.

All other classes of society, merchants, farmers and producers have been impressed with the fact that Dr. Pardee is a safe, conservative, clear-headed patriotic citizen, who will give California a wise and able administration.

But over confidence should not allow anything to be left to chance. The majority should be made as large as possible. It should be made decisive because of the moral effect it will have abroad. Republicans should send to their brethren in other States, through the ballot box, the message that California stands by Roosevelt and the protective tariff. This message should not have any uncertain ring. The larger the majority for Pardee the louder it will speak. It will hearten the Republican hosts everywhere. It will be notice that the signal fires of Republicanism are burning brightly in this State, and the grand army of Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley and Roosevelt is in line for the great principles which have animated the Republican party since its birth.

A small majority would be but a half-hearted note of encouragement to the Republicans of the East. It would convey an idea that Republican strength and Republican purpose were waning and weakening out here. It would indicate that Roosevelt is not giving satisfaction as President and that faith in the principle of protection was declining. Therefore let every Republican put his shoulder to the wheel and assist in rolling up a majority that will settle all doubts as to California's political attitude.

The character and fitness of the Board of Supervisors will be maintained by electing J. R. Talcott and Joseph M. Kelley, the Republican nominees. They are both successful business men, who have demonstrated their capacity and probity. These are the men to elect if the tax payers desire a strong and efficient Board of Supervisors to manage the county's affairs.

Victor H. Metcalf is the best Congressman the Third District ever had. Swell his majority.

Dr. Mehrmann has made a good Coroner. Give him another term.

SOUVENIRS IN A CRAZY QUILT.

Through the efforts of J. E. Crumbaugh, who had charge of the Missouri exhibits at the Omaha, Buffalo and Charleston expositions, the directors of the Columbia Fair have secured for exhibition purposes at this year's fair, which will be held the first part of August, a very curious and valuable quilt. The quilt is valued at $300, and contains more than 200 pieces of goods cut from dresses and neckties worn by famous women and men. Each piece of goods is accompanied by an autograph letter. These letters themselves form a rare collection, which it would be impossible to duplicate.

Among the contributors to this unique quilt are the following: Alice and Phoebe Cary, John G. Whittier, Ouida, Louisa M. Alcott, Jean Ingelow, Mark Twain, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Chas. Egbert Craddock, Oliver Wendell Holmes, William Black, Henry Ward Beecher, W. D. Howells, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Gen. Lew Wallace, Paderewski, Patti, Rosed Cleveland, Mary Curtis Lee, Mrs. Tom Thumb, Mrs. R. E. Lee, Gen U. S. Grant, Gen. John A. Logan, Gen. J. C. Fremont, Gen. W. S. Rosecrans, Gen. Stirling Price, Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, Grover Cleveland, John G. Carlisle, G. G. Vest, Mrs. Jas. K. Polk, Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Gen. Joe Wheeler, Joseph Jefferson, Thos. W. Keene, Sol Smith Russell, Fanny Davenport, Julia Marlow ,and Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

The contributions of Gen. Lew Wallace and several others were in the form of indelible autographs on silk. Some of the singers sent pieces embroidered with bars of some famous songs. One of the pieces, embroidered in gold, was cut from the dress of the Queen of Delhi at the time her palace was looted during the Sepoy rebellion. This quilt is the property of R. M. Yost of St. Louis. The pieces composing it were collected by him and his wife during sixteen years of travel about the world.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BETTY MARTIN TALKS ABOUT THE MEN AT HOME.

SHE TELLS HOW TO REACH THE HEARTS OF HUSBANDS—SOMETHING ABOUT MUSICAL CLUBS.

BY BETTY MARTIN.

At the beginning of the present political campaign the Republican Women's Club of Provo, Utah, fitted up sumptuous rooms, occupying one entire floor of a big business block, and gave a big dinner by way of housewarming.

This dinner the ladies themselves prepared without the aid of hired cooks or help of any sort. Then they called in the men politicians from far and near to help eat it. One enthusiastic individual, with an eye on the United States senate, travelled all night long, so as not to miss the opportunity to be present.

Among the many toasts offered was "The Easiest Way to a Man's Heart." One of the gentlemen present replied thereto with a flowery speech in which he paid all sorts of fulsome compliments to the ladies, but failed to tell the easiest way to reach a man's heart, which problem had been already slyly solved by the W. R. C., when they set the well-cooked dinner before the hungry politicians.

It has long been a popular supposition that the easiest way to reach a man's heart is through his stomach, and I for one, don't doubt it.

Is a man cross? Give him a good dinner.

Do you want to win him over to your way of thinking? Prepare a dish to his liking.

Do you want money from him, or a favor of any sort? Feast him.

Why, even men as men recognize the fact that not only to reach the heart but the brain, work must be commenced on the stomach. It's either a drink or a dinner where diplomacy is required.

All the leading business houses and firms with travelling representatives always allow them so much per month for dinners and kindred expenses. This account frequently reaches up into the hundreds in a single month, but no complaints are made, for the harvest returns a hundred fold.

Men are always found who are ready to sell their birthright for a mess of pottage.

Indeed, not so very many years since, a man whose home is in Oakland, lost the management of a big paying insurance company simply through his refusal to go out at the noon hour and drink beer and eat sauerkraut and cheese with one of the directors, who was a millionaire of German extraction with a strong liking for these dainty tid-bits.

The smell of Limberger and beer made the manager sick, and he was prone to indulge in a liking for the hot bird and cold bottle. However, his refusal to alter his tastes cost him his company, for although it was paying dividends, the worthy director, through sheer malice, bought up the whole concern and wiped it out of existence.

The recent disastrous fires on the Guatemalan coffee plantations will put an end temporarily, at least to a certain branch of fancy needle work, indulged in by fair Californias. For some time they have been utilizing the gaily colored coffee sacks shipped from Central America, by making sofa pillows and other kinds of drawn work out of them.

These sacks, always rather hard to obtain, have been getting rarer lately, as the shipments of Gautemala coffee has decreased, and now the destructive fires will in all probability, mean their extinction from the realm of needle work.

It is not generally known that these coffee sacks come from Central America only, where the color of the sacks has a distinct commercial value. Each coffee plantation does its own coloring, and dealers therefore know the brand contained in the different sacks.

California ladies have a high regard for these sacks, and local groceries never could supply the demand for them. They are used chiefly for drawn work, and like the Indian baskets are becoming beautifully less.

It seems a pity that the concerts of our two leading choral societies should follow each other so closely, for people rarely find it convenient to attend two such gatherings in one week, much as they might enjoy doing so.

Both the Orpheus and the Hughes Club are doing much to raise the standard of musical taste in this community, and are deserving of high praise for their successful efforts.

Many people have expressed a desire to hear these organizations sing together at a joint performance, could they be induced to appear together.

The ladies of the Hughes Club introduced a pretty innovation on Wednesday evening by acting as ushers. It seemed to take away from the formality of the occasion and make it assume more the features of a home function.

Oddly enough, there are no classes for sight reading in Oakland. Years ago, that sort of thing was learned at singing schools, but there has been no opportunity to do so of late.

In New York this season, there will be sixteen classes for the study of sight reading, under the auspices of the People's Choral Union. Frank Damrosch has general supervision of all the classes, selects the teachers, and personally conducts the choruses of graduating members.

Why couldn't a similar work, on lesser lines, of course, be successfully carried out in Oakland.

Something should be done with that northern sheriff who proposes to make capital out of a hanging, or his example might prove contageous. One hears of all sorts of novel ways of making money, but without question the idea of charging the general public so much a head to witness a hanging takes the palm for originality.

It seems, however, that the plan originated with the condemned man himself, who thought it would be a good idea to provide for his son's education in this way.. What a preposterous thing it is that any one should be willing to foster such an idea.

The death penalty should be paid in the presence of a certain number of witnesses, required by law. Public exhibitions lower the standard of morals and whet course and idle curiosity.

Rather a joke on Ebell ladies, that debate last Tuesday.

"Resolved, That clubs are beneficial to mothers.

The negative side won, according to a jury of their peers, and this in the face of the fact that the majority of Ebell members are mothers, some of them several times over, and enthusiastic in their attendance on club gatherings. There certainly must be a screw loose somewhere. I wager the papers prepared would make excellent reading, and it seems a shame that the general public should be deprived of the priviledge of knowing just what arguments were advanced against clubs for mothers, at this particular time.

Debates are the fashion of the hour, and it is possibly a good thing that the women's clubs have taken to debating, for now one may hope for improvement along the line of addresses and delivery.

Women have taken it upon themselves to enact the role of reformers, so it is up to them now to restore the lost art of oratory.

THE HEALTH OF HAVANA.

Dr. John Guiteras writes to us to protest against a statement which has recently been going the rounds of the newspapers to the effect that the sanitary condition of Havana has been rapidly deteriorating since the withdrawal of the American government from Cuba. This statement slipped into our news items, and we are glad to have the opportunity to correct it on the high authority of Dr. Guiteras. We have also the report by Dr. Carlos J. Finlay, chief sanitary officer of Havana. This report makes a very satisfactory showing for the month of June. The number of deaths for that month represented an annual death rate of 23.56 per 1,000 inhabitants. This is not far above the death rate for New York, Boston and Baltimore, all of which American cities show a rate slightly in excess of 20 or 21 per thousand. The rate for Philadelphia, as we pointed out recently, is lower.

In Havana a slight increase in the number of deaths from entritis and typhoid fever had occurred in June. This was possibly due to the objectionable methods employed by Chinese truck gardeners, and also to a break in one of the mains supplying the city with drinking water. The alertness and energy of the health department of Havana were shown in the way they met these conditions. The vegetables were found contaminated with a virulent colon bacillus, which, when obtained from the washings, was capable of killing guinea pigs in less than forty-eight hours. The city of Havana, and the whole island, in fact, had continued free from yellow fever originating within their boundaries. Two cases, which had been imported from Vera Cruz, were treated after most approved methods.

It would be strange, indeed, if, with the experts now in charge, the sanitary conditions of Havana should in any way deteriorate; and it will be time for the public press to cry out when the figures show a loss of control. With such men as Dr. Finlay and Dr. Guiteras on the scene, there would appear to be neither reason for, nor danger of, any recurrence to former conditions.—Philadelphia Medical Journal.

A MILLIONAIRE JOCKEY TO WED.

A jockey worth 25 million dollars who is about to become the stepson of a bishop and is himself soon to marry a noted beauty, and who rides for the fun of it, is one of the talked about men in that wonderful mixed world of the local race tracks.

"Brose" Clark's riding and "Brose" Clark's romance have supplied the sentiment for the racing year of 1902, when the tall, boyish millionaire gives his farewell bachelor dinner to his chums, every denizen of Sheepshead Bay, from the society folk in the boxes to the layers in the betting ring and the stable boys in the paddocks, will drink a health to a good fellow and a plucky rider.

Of all the things that a young man with his millions might do young Clark who is the son of Bishop Potter's fiancee, has chosen riding. He is rarely ever out of his riding suit, and every day when he is in town he is at the track, his pretty fiancee almost invariably by his side.

Sheepshead Bay is taking the deepest interest in Frederick Ambrose Clark's wedding, which occurs two weeks from Tuesday. Miss Florence Lockwood Stokes, daughter of Henry B. Stokes, the life insurance man, is the bride-to-be.

Some of the finest riding seen at the New York tracks or at Saratoga this year has been that of this interesting young man. He always rides his own horses, which are among the best jumpers on the track. His favorite mounts are Jim Megibben and Rowdy, the latter of which ran in Saturday's steeplechase at Sheepshead.

A pluckier rider never was seen. Young Clark enjoys the distinction of being the finest cross country rider in the United States. He has been brought up in the saddle, and when he is at his country place at Cooperstown he spends almost the entire day astride some of his picked saddle horses.—New York World.

THE BANSHEE CRY.

When the great gray fog rolled in
The cry came up from the sea:
'Twas not the shriek of the wind-swept bird
Or the voice of human kind.
It beat like a dead man's hand
On the casement he fain would find;
Three times it came and went, three times I quaked as I heard—
For you or for me, O'Connell, is it for you or me?

I flung the casement wide:
The gray fog drifted through;
There was roar of the wind and wave
And never a sound beside.
I pressed the cross to my heart
Till my breast with the blood was dyed,
O, little the use to pray, little the time to save—
For you or for me, O'Connell, is it for you or me?

Oh, Mary, Mary, Mother,
Which soul dost thou hold in fee?
Mine, the bride of a night and a day,
Priest-bound to a bond abhorred?
Or the red O'Connel himself,
Chieftain and master and lord?
I have heard the banshee's cry, the death hoves on their way—
For you or for me, O'Connell, is it for you or me?
—Theodosia Garrison in the Criterion.

IN THE EXPERIMENTAL STAGE.

"No reliable system of wireless telegraphy has yet been developed." This statement was made this afternoon by Rear-Admiral Royal T. Bradford, chief of the bureau of equipment, who has especial charge of all matters connected with communications in the navy. Upon the recommendation of Rear-Admiral Bradford, tests of various systems, which were declared to have worked satisfactorily, have been in progress between the Washington navy yard and the naval academy. The admiral declined today to make public any of the results of the tests, but there is reason for believing that they have not shown the desirability of the immediate equipment of the service with wireless telegraphy system.

The recent manoeuvers demonstrated the need of wireless telegraphy, provided a reliable system could be obtained, but it has not been produced, according to Rear Admiral Bradford, and the navy will probably have to wait until something more satisfactory is found. The tests will not, however, cease. The department wants to find out just what each system is worth.

A few days ago the gunboat Topeka was ordered to report to the board which is conducting the tests, the intention being to send the boat out into Chesapeake bay and exchange messages between it and the naval academy. The Topeka was not considered suitable and the Prairie has been selected in its stead. This communication will be similar to that which will be conducted between ships and fortifications in time of war. Upon the conclusion of these experiments one of the war-ships of the North Atlantic squadron will be equipped with the system which shows the most promise, and, with the Prairie, will be sent to sea. The two ships will communicate with each other, observing any defects and any advantages.

They will represent in this instance a flagship and the vessels of a squadron the commander-in-chief attempting to send instructions with reference to prospective operations to his subordinates. None of the systems has worked continuously over a period of fifty miles, and the question of interference has yet to be solved. Rear-Admiral Bradford has hoped to obtain a satisfactory system and equip with it the ships which will participate in the impending winter manoeuvers. This, however, will be impossible in view of the information now in his possession.—Washington Letter to Chicago Tribune.

THE OLD CRY AGAINST CONTEMPORARY LITERATURE.

The statistics show an enormous increase in the number of books read. This tendency is criticesed in high quarters on the ground that with the increase in quantity there has been deterioration in the quality of the reading. The charge may or may not be true; but fifty years ago in the prospectus of a new periodical we find Lowell in the same way lamenting over "the enormous quantity of thrice-diluted trash" poured out by the magazines of the day; and fifty years ago books were hard to procure, reading was largely confined to the cultured and studious classes, while with the wonderful growth of free libraries and the cheapening of books reading is becoming universal among all classes.—Atlantic Monthly.

SCHOOL.

Once more the bell begins to ring,
And o'er the dell I gayly wing.
At book and slate I now must din
And strike my gait, for school is in.

No more I'll scud and scoot and skim
And in the mud-hole take a swim.
Or smoke the corn-silk cigarette
At night and morn and noon, you bet!

For school is in, and on my way
I now must spin, nor stop to play.
The bell I hear, so swift and straight
I now must steer, or I'll be late.

HONORED BY A QUEEN.

The Queen Mother of Spain to Sit for Her Portrait.

To Alice Barber Stephens, the woman illustrator of the United States, belongs the distinction of overcoming the prejudice of Maria Christina, the queen mother of Spain, against all things American.

Despite the queen's intense dislike of the people of this country she has requested Mrs. Stephens to paint her portrait. Coming from Spain's queen mother this request is a decided tribute to the charm of the American woman, and to her knowledge of her art.

The two met in Paris. The queen was there for the first time since her marriage, twenty-three years ago. It is almost as long since Mrs. Stephens has visited the French capital. She was there, with her artist brother, Charles Stephens, and little son, Owen, enjoying a much-needed rest.

When they met the queen forgot her dislike of the American nation in her admiration of the woman and the artist. Arrangements for the portrait followed. Word comes from Paris that Mrs. Stephens will follow the queen to Madrid for the paintings that must follow. The portrait will be done in black and white.

It is a quarter of a century since Alice Barber began her work as an illustrator. She was probably not more than fifteen years old when she began as a wood engraver on the old Scribner's Monthly, now the Century Magazine, furnishing the pictures and engraving them on wood.

Even in those young years she showed remarkable strength. A notable example of her work hangs in the Academy of the Fine Arts, where she first studied. It is a reproduction of the life class circle around the model. This picture is prophetic of the success that were to come to the girl artist in after years.

Later Alice Barber studied under Howard Pyle, and in Paris was a pupil at the Academy Julian, under Carlo Rossi. When abroad in her youth she visited the various art galleries of Europe, and in that way received valuable training.

It is probably twenty years since she returned to Philadelphia and again took up her life work. In her art Mrs. Stephens is usually an idealist. She recognizes vividly, however, the distinctions which mark the different social strata, and can suggest these with delicate surety. Trivial accessories of dress, every attitude of the subject, suggest a status in birth and breeding and in the condition of life. This is distinctly a woman's intuition. She knows a thing because in her woman's way she feels it to be so, as it usually is.

Thus it is that her studies and characters and compositions have "atmosphere," the strongest quality of personal appeal and one usually of such indefinable charm as to disarm criticism and to persuade interest. When men have this quality, with dash and vigor, it is the perfection of style.

Mrs. Stephens loves healthy, robust qualities, and considers individuality the most important thing. She esteems technique as incidental. If one has a story to tell the main point is to express it as simply and as directly as possible; if it can be well told, so much the better, but the manner of telling is secondary. That is her creed.

Years have elapsed since Mrs. Stephens has taken a rest worthy the name. When she sailed abroad it was her intention to remain and idle away the time for eighteen months. Afterward she wrote to friends here that her stay on the other side would be limited to a year. Her intention to paint the queen's portrait comes as a distinct surprise.—From the Philadelphia North American.

JOHN R. GLASCOCK FOR JUDGE.

MANY CITIZENS BELIEVE HE OUGHT TO BE ELEVATED TO THE SUPERIOR BENCH.

John R. Glascock has lived in this community from early youth.

In private station and public life he has always stood for the best citizenship. A sound lawyer, his professional career is without taint. He has never been known to push an advantage beyond the line of justice, and every client who has consulted him will bear testimony that he has always served them with fidelity, but has never countenanced artifice and sharp practice. Those qualities are deserving of admiration in the days when a nice sense of honor is not always observed in the practice of law.

Mr. Glascock has an honorable record as District Attorney, as Congressman, and Mayor of the City. He did his duty in every capacity. He is now before the people as a candidate for Judge of the Superior Court, a position that every citizen who has watched his career knows that he is eminently fitted to hold. Mr. Glascock has not only the requisite ability and learning, but he has a character and a keen sense of right that give litigants and attorneys assurance of receiving even-handed justice at his hands. He will not shrink from responsibility nor strain the quality of justice.

The office of Judge is non-political. No good citizen expects that partisan leanings will in the slightest degree, control the decisions of a righteous judge.

To assume to the contrary is to assume that the Judge is either corrupt or prejudiced. In either case he is unfit to sit on the bench. As no political significance can attach to the proper administration of justice. The private political convictions of a Judge are of small consequence. The controlling question should be: Is he able, is he honest, is he just?

For John R. Glascock the answer must be, yes. It is not a question of doubt; it is an assurance of fact.

Therefore, Mr. Glascock should be elected Superior Judge.

MANY CITIZENS.

LARGE RALLY OF LABOR PARTY

BIG PARADE AND A CROWDED MEETING AT THE TABERNACLE.

The Union Labor party held its largest rally last night at the Tabernacle. There was a big parade on Broadway prior to the meeting.

The heavens were illuminated with the many colored balls shot out by the Roman candles, while the air was full of music. Occasionally a shout would burst from the paraders, sometimes for one of the State candidates, but more often for the county nominees of the Union Labor party. A special train from the interior of the county brought the members of the Union Labor Pary Club of Newark and many others from the interior towns. Over a hundred, or more than one quarter of the men in the parade, came in on the special train.

The parade formed at Fourth and Broadway and, headed by a band and the Flambeaux Club with forty men in uniform, marched north to Ninth street, thence to Washington, north to Fourteenth, south to Eleventh street and east to the Tabernacle. All along the line of march the firing of Roman candles continued, and at times the flying sparks became so dense that all thought of order or keeping in step was abandoned, and the parade proceeded, just a large body of men.

At the Tabernacle the crowds of union men swarmed into the big building and standing room was at a premium. On the ground floor people sat in the aisles and in the gallery many sat on the railing and rafters.

After the speakers of the evening took their places upon the platform with the county and district candidates of the party the gathering sent up a cheer from the 2,000 or more lusty lungs of enthusiastic auditors. B. B. Booth introduced as chairman of the evening Charles K. Clark, president of the Carmen's Union.

Charles L. Pierce was the first speaker to be introduced, and he briefly addressed the meeting. He was followed by T. C. Crawford.

The speaker of the evening was George Estes, national president of the U. B. R. E. The mention of his name was the cue for unlimited applause, and the enthusiasm lasted for some moments. Twice the speaker attempted to make himself heard, but was forced to desist by the cheering crowd. When he was allowed to speak his remarks were ofttimes interrupted by applause.

During the course of his remarks Mr. Estes said: "I am a candidate for better conditions and broader principles in county, State and nation. I want to see shorter days of work, and to secure this you laboring men must concentrate your efforts and secure an eight hour day. You must get it down to eight hours to enjoy the freedom and comfortable home life which is your due.

"At this age the increase in labor saving machinery is rapid and some are wont to say that it is crushing the laboring man. Men are driving their brains mad in efforts to conceive and invent implements which save labor, but in spite of this fact I claim that these men are benefiting the human race. These inventors were intended by providence and I believe intended to relieve men from eternal bondage. It is these machines which are to shorten the hours of labor and make the world better."

MRS. JENNIE MORRIS,

Secretary of Poinsettia Benevolence Society,

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

623 Grand Ave., Milwaukee, Wis., March 22, 1902.

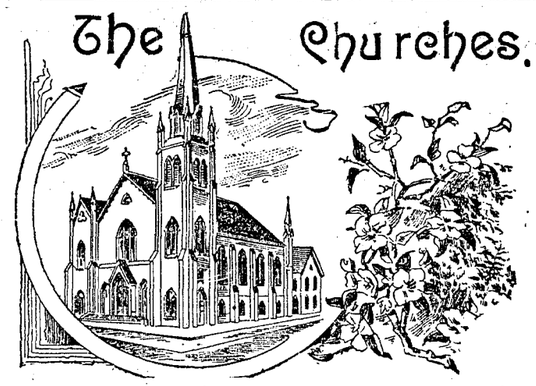

Only a wife and mother can fully understand the grand benefit which Wine of Cardui is in cases of barrenness and pregnancy. After five years of married life most of the time in ill health, with irregular, scanty and extremely painful menstruation I became completely discouraged. I kept getting worse and worse. The doctor said that if I could have a child I would be much better, but inflammation had set in and I was in such poor health generally that I was simply unfit to be a mother. My sister had a beautiful boy and she told me what benefit she had derived from Wine of Cardui so my husband decided that we would stop the doctor's visits and try Cardui. I wish I had only known of this before. What misery I would have been spared! But I was grateful for the speedy relief I obtained, and so pleased to find that I gradually was returning to health, happiness and new life and hope. Within four months I was like a changed being and now found that the long hoped for happiness was to be mine as I expected a child. I kept taking Wine of Cardui all through my pregnancy and a lovely daughter blessed our home. Childbirth was almost painless and my husband and I both thank you a thousand times for the sunshine and happiness Wine of Cardui brought to our home.

Jennie Morris.

THE greatest ambition of men and women is to have happy homes blessed with healthy children. Because wives are weak and sick thousands of homes are barren and desolate. How many there are today suffering irregularities and bearing down pains, menaced with the probability of becoming childless wives. Thousands of heretofore childless wives are becoming mothers by having these troubles relieved by Wine of Cardui. This great remedy so strengthens the organs of motherhood that nervous, discouraged women who want children but who fear the suffering caused by childbirth, go through motherhood with little trouble. By strengthening the organs weakened by sickness Wine of Cardui makes all this possible. No medicine can restore dead organs, but Wine of Cardui does regulate derangements that prevent conception, does prevent miscarriage, does restore weak functions and shattered nerves and does bring babies to homes barren and desolate for years. Get a dollar bottle of Wine of Cardui from your dealer and treat yourself in the privacy of your home with this great remedy. Where digestive disorders exist a small package of Thedford's Black-Draught should also be used.

AN IDEAL MEDICINE.

A NEW DISCOVERY WHICH CURES ALL FORMS OF CATARRH.

The tablet is the ideal form in which to administer medicine, but until recently no successful catarrh tablet had ever been attempted. There is now, however, an excellent and palatable remedy for catarrh in tablet form, known as Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and sold by druggists composed of the most recent discoveries in medicine for cure of catarrh and results from their use have been highly gratifying.

The old time treatment of catarrh was in the form of inhalers, washes, douches, sprays, etc. Later on internal remedies were used with greater success, but being in liquid or powder form were inconvenient to use and like all medicines in liquid or powder form, lose their medicinal properties when opened or exposed to the air.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets contain highly concentrated antiseptics, Hydrastin, Blood root, and Red gum which kill the catarrh germs in the blood and mucous membrane, and in this respect are strictly scientific and modern, because all authorities are now agreed that catarrh is a constitutional blood disease, and local applications can have only a transitory effect.

The use of inhalers, douches and sprays is a nuisance and inconvenience and can in no wise compare favorably with the same antiseptics given in tablet form internally, where they can reach the stomach and blood and kill catarrh germs right where they are produced.

A prominent lawyer and public speaker of Pittsburg says: "I have been troubled with catarrh of the head and throat for twelve years. In this climate it seems impossible to get rid of it. The continual dropping of mucous from the nose into the throat caused irritation and hoarseness, seriously interfering with my public speaking. It took me an hour or more of coughing, gagging, expectorating and sneezing every morning before I could settle down to work and this condition gradually brought on catarrh of stomach, causing loss of appetite poor digestion and a foul breath, which annoyed me exceedingly. My physician advised me to try Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and I took them for two months and was astonished to find how quickly they cleared my head, throat and stomach and I have no hesitation in recommending them. They are not only pleasant to take, but they seem to get at the very root of the trouble, because since using them I have had no trace of catarrh."

Druggists sell Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at 50 cents for full sized package.

They can be carried in the pocket and used any time and as often as desired since they contain no cocaine, mercury or any other injurious drug.

BRAVE CONDUCTOR PASSES AWAY.

Kenneth Compton, conductor of the West Berkeley train, who was shot on the morning of September 11th by an unknown footpad while on his way home, died of his injuries late last night at his residence, 2028 Eighth street, Berkeley.

THEATRE EMPLOYEE LOSES HIS SILVER.

Jack MawDonough, an employee of the Dewey Theatre, reported to Chief of Police Hodgkins this morning that during the performance last night $33 in silver was taken from the pocket of his trousers, which were hanging in the dressing room. The matter has been placed in the hands of detectives to investigate.

TODAY'S NEWS LETTER.

Under the heading, "Father Yorke," today's issue of the News Letter has an exhaustive article. "Fashions in Gowns" contains much that will interest women. It tells what is to be worn this winter, and describes in detail new dresses worn by prominent San Francisco beauties. The News Letter's "Looker On" department is particularly rich in stories about prominent people, and has some interesting things about the late Frank Norris. In its financial, insurance, automobile, literary and dramatic departments it gives all the news relating to those subjects. Its society columns are filled with interesting gossip of the members of the smart set, and contain a complete record of their comings and going. Every department in the News Letter is bright, clever, written in a most interesting style. It has more than its usual amount of original verse this week.

TOWN TALK.

There's a flavor of culturine in the "Saunterer" pages of "Town Talk," this week. A hitherto unpublished verse by the late Frank Norris is given, apropos of the reminiscences about the gifted author. Bits from Mrs. Archer Huntington's little volume of verse are quoted, a volume just out. There are also some readable paragraphs anent education in general, with the late C. P. Huntington's idea on the subject. Politics of course cover a page or two, Sam Rainey's great story being told, and the way a Marin county candidate got mixed as to facts. The second of a series of "Fairy Tales of the Swim," the first of which appeared a few months ago, will be relished by all of the newly betrothed. There is a pretty little story besides. Jack London's book of short stories, and James Creelman's novel are reviewed. All the latest bits of news in the music and stage line are given, and the financial column is instructive and entertaining.

A LARGE INVOICE OF PIANOS.

The Girard Piano Company of this city has received during the past two weeks ten carloads of pianos, being about 150 instruments, which embrace the well known makes of the Henry and S. G. Lindeman, Merrill, Davenport and Treacy, Bailey, Dunham, Richardson and many other equally well known makes. Colonel J. E. Fox, the capable manager of the Girard Piano Company, stated this morning that he is doing an exceptionally fine business, as his recent large consignment of pianos show, most of those pianos that have recently arrived have already been disposed of. This reliable house are the sole agents in Oakland for the celebrated Weber piano and also the famed Apollo, which has such a wide reputation.

SMITH FOR TREASURER

William Smith, the well known Washington street clothing merchant, who is the candidate on the Union Labor ticket for County Treasurer, seems to have an excellent chance of success. Mr. Smith is making an aggressive campaign, and as he is widely and favorably known and popular with all classes of citizens, he will certainly be at the top of the list of the nominees in the number of votes cast for the Union Labor county ticket. His friends predict his election.

DOLL SHOW WILL BE A LARGE AFFAIR

The ladies who are interested in the West Oakland Home are working indefatigably to make the coming Doll Show and Sale, which occurs on the afternoons and evenings of December 4, 5 and 6, at Maple Hall. A grand success. A most unique program is promised, and when one recalls the very delightful affair of last year, which netted a goodly sum toward the much-needed building fund, it will be readily believed that this future attraction will call out all the little ones and a fair proportion of the adult charitably-inclined people of Oakland.

TELLS OF THE ADVANTAGES OF OAKLAND.

John T. Bell Writes of the Athens of the Pacific.

He Says it Is One of the Grandest Cities in the United States.

Oakland, November 1, 1902.

EDITOR TRIBUNE: In order to properly appreciate Oakland one should visit other localities. During a recent absence I was in Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, Vermont, Michigan and Canada. In many places or double the poplation of Oakland I did not see a dry goods store, a men's furnishing store, a meat market, a furniture store or a bank building in that large area of country which will equal like establishments in this city, and in respect of electric street car facilities and electric lighting Oakland is right up in the front rank. In harbor advantages it also excels, it has superior streets and sidewalks, and in beauty of location and charm of surroundings it has no superior anywhere.

It is gratifying to note a mark of change in the local "atmosphere"—the spirit of the town. It is very evident that business men are becoming more and more united as to matters of public concern; there is an increase of civic pride and hopefulness as to the future and a better appreciation of what is needed to build up Oakland on broad lines.

The success of the bond proposition will be a splendid advertisement for this city. Strangers take favorable note of a community busily engaged in laying pavements and sidewalks; erecting school houses and other public structures; developing parks and boulevards, etc. These all proclaim enterprise and confidence in the future. Temporarily, it may be, taxes are somewhat increased, but the result is a rapid increase in population and a decided decrease in the pro rata of taxation.

The United States census returns for 1900 show that manufacturing can be carried on in California at less cost than in the Atlantic States on account of the even and mild climate which permits of more hours labor per year and reduced expense for heating factories in the winter. In view of this fact it is surprising to find this State so deficient in manufactories. Here at Oakland is made the finest leather in the country and the conversion of a considerable portion of it into shoes, harness and belting would apear to be a very profitable enterprise.

Tons upon tons of the finest fruit in the world decay every year in this county and the county just south and enormous quantities of tomatoes and cucumbers are grown in this vicinity, yet Oakland grocers have their shelves loaded with james, marmalade, jellies, catsup and pickles put up in England—doubtless a considerable portion made of California fruit and vegetables.

At the home of Mr. Wm. H. H. Graves, 1220 Linden Street, this city, may be seen a beautiful ornamental piece of pottery, a vase, the first of that ware made west of the Rocky Mountains, and that, with numerous other samples, was made by Mr. Graves in Oakland in 1885, from California clays of which there is great abundance. And Mr. Graves says that this is the only State in the Union which produces suitable clay, gazing and coloring material. All kinds of articles made of clay, from the thin egg-shell cup to porcelain bath tubs could be made at a profit to Oakland. This is also the fact in regard to enameled or agate ware, which is used in enormous quantities.

Earthen retents are the best for gas works but iron retents are in general use on this coast on account of the expense and delay of bringing them from the East by water. These could be made here.

No better iron ore is found anywhere than in California and in apparently inexhaustible quantities. Oakland is especially well located for the establisment of foundries and machine shops. The building of ships and of railway locomotives would create an enormous demand for the output.

The cotton mills of this city, it is said, is one of the best-paying enterprises on the coast and if this is the fact, with not an ounce of cotton produced in the State, why would not the manufacture of woolen goods in California, long noted for her great flocks of sheep, be even more profitable?

The Judson Iron Works, just north of Oakland, do an immense business in the manufacture of nails and tacks, in addition to a general business, but cannot, of course, supply even the local demand for these staples.

With the development of the iron mines of the State, a stove manufortory could, doubtless, be made a paying enterprise here.

Oakland is on the eve of great things. Tremendous changes will take place within a few years and it is possible the child is now living who will see on this side of the bay a city greater than the San Francisco of that period in the future. When Lincoln was nominated in Chicago in 1860 the man who, standing on the platform of that convention, should have proclaimed that, forty years later, Chicago would be the second city in the Union, and compelling New York to annex many surrounding towns to maintain her own supremacy, would have been considered insane.

The time has come when it is a good thing for Oaklanders—men, women and children—to be loyal to their town, to talk it up. Chicago was plotted in a swamp and Kansas City on steep hillsides. Neither was, on the face of it, a desirable site for a city, but both had the advantage of geographical position and a citizenship which boasts, early and late, at home and abroad, by word of mouth and through printers' ink, of its own town and that fact has been an important element in the marvelous growth of those cities. Oakland has geographical position, an unsurpassed site for the building of a great city and if the people who live here would display energy and enthusiasm in spreading abroad the actual truth in regard to Oakland's merits they will contribute materially to the city's development. JOHN T. BELL.

WHAT MEDDLER HAS TO SAY ABOUT MEMBERS OF SMART SET.

Some Interesting Affairs in Local Society—Weddings, Receptions and Parties--Personal Notes.

FOUR WEDDINGS IN ONE WEEK.

Four weddings in which our set was interested, all in one week—those of Kate Chabot and Clare Tucker Williams we haven't finished talking over yet—besides a number of teas, lunches, card parties and a dinner or two, have made this a particularly good week in society, and if things only keep on at this rate, we shall have a very gay winter to look forward to.

WEDDING OF MISS CHABOT.

The wedding of Kate Chabot and Dr. Dunn was, of course, a complete surprise to all of us, the thirty or more close friends who had been invited to the house on Tuesday evening, expecting nothing more than the usual very good dinner Mrs. Chabot knows so well how to regale her guests with. Kate was expected at Mona Crellin's card party that afternoon, but at the last moment telephoned that she was obliged to go to the city and wouldn't be able to be there, and even when some of the girls happened to be at the florists late that afternoon, and saw the dozens and dozens of pink carnations being sent to the Chabot's, they did not dream that they were to adorn a bridal table. It was only after Dr. Dunn's intimate friend, Al Moore, had applied for a marriage license, late in the evening, that the news got about, and then only in a small way. It is fun to surprise every one, as they did The ceremony took place in the long drawing room which was done over so beautifully for Josie Chabot's wedding to Henry Dieckmann Jr., the only floral decoration in the room being in the bay window, where the ceremony was performed by Father Blake of St. Helena, an old friend of the family, and there masses of white and yellow chrysanthemums were banked. Kate wore a beautiful wedding gown of white satin entrain, over which fell the wedding veil of Duchesse lace, and she carried white carnations. Claire Chabot—who is now the only unmarried daughter of the house—was the sole attendant, and looked lovely in a tucked gown of pink chiffon and silk, carrying pink carnations.

Mrs. Chabot wore a gown of black lace with her diamond necklace and other jewels, Mrs. Dieckmann was in white Duchesse satin and Mrs. Knight in pink satin. Those who sat at the bride's table—which was lighted with pretty pink candelabra—were Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Moore, Jr., Dr. William Dunn, Claire Chabot, Leon Boqueray of San Francisco, Mrs. William Ede, who was May Burnham, Philip Abbott, Mrs. Rob Knight, Mrs. Dieckmann, Charlie Bates, Miss Margaret Dunn and Fred Dieckmann. I believe the happy pair are now at Villa Remi near St. Helena, and when they return in a week or so, are to live with Mrs. Chabot.

CLARE WILLIAMS' MARRIAGE.

Clare Tucker Williams and Ned Brayton, were, as you know by this time, married on Monday evening, at Mrs. Tucker's sister's house on Sixty-seventh street, in New York, only the immediate relatives and a few friends from here, who were in New York, being present. When Clare and Ned went East with Mrs. Tucker, many of us who had heard of the threats made by Clare's former husband, suspected that the wedding would take place in the East, although until the relatives here received telegrams, no one knew that they had planned to be married quite so soon. They are having a honeymoon trip all over the East now and haven't yet decided when they will return and occupy the Du Val house on Alice Street, which they have taken for the winter. Clare has one of the sweetest natures of any girl I know, and is so popular with people of every class, that there are many, many people who are just now wishing her all kinds of happiness, and she certainly deserves a big share of it.

WEDDING OF MISS HYDE.

Mabel Hyde's wedding to Edwin Fraser Gillette of Chicago also took place on Monday, although their's was a noon wedding.

It took place, of course, at the home of Mabel's aunt, Mrs. David Bixler, who has always been awfully good to her three nieces, although Mrs. Hyde will never be made to accept anything for it from her. It seems that Mabel Helen Hyde met Mr. Gillette at the mother and sister, when they were coming from Japan, and the acquaintance ripened from a trip around the world later visited his people at their country home on the shores of the Wisconsin lakes with her daughter, Mrs. Jenks, came out with the groom for the wedding. Everything was very prettily carried out at the wedding, and there were a hundred or more present, the Rev. Robert Ritchie of our St. Paul's, officiating. The wedding bower was quite unique, and was made at one end of the drawing room. Yellow ribbons held the point lace shawl, under which all the brides of the family have stood, and it made a very odd and pretty canopy. The bride has always been better known as "Daisy," rather more than Mabel, and all the decorations were of white and yellow daisies. The little flower girls, Harriet Bradford, Dorothy Mooser, Ethel Bentley and Thelma Parker, all in white, led the way, carrying daisy chains with ivy as a foundation. Next came the bridesmaids, Mary Faull and Florence Morrison, who were also in white and carrying the chain. Helen Hyde's maid of honor's gown was of white organdie and lace, daisies or marguerites adorning her hair and composing her bouquet. The bride, who looked very well in her unconventional wedding gown of exquisitely embroidered French muslin, made from a gown forty years old, with Valenciennes lace used for the yoke and sleeves, wore a daisy chain in her hair and the wedding veil—worn by Mrs. Bixler on her wedding day—was caught to the hair with the same flowers. The bride's uncle, Roth Hyde, acted as best man, and Mrs. Bixler, in black velvet, Duchesse lace and diamonds, gave the bride away.

A feature of the wedding was the music arranged by Mrs. Marriner Campbell, and a complete surprise to the bride. Just as the bridal party appeared on the stairway, a quartet of young women's voices were heard in "Tender and True," and the wedding music from Lohengrin. Later, while the wedding breakfast was going on, they sang a Japanese love song and "Believe Me, If All These Endearing Young Charms," and "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes." Later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Gillette left for Del Monte and returned in time to sail for Japan on Thursday, Helen Hyde returning on the same steamer, for another two or three years' stay in the Orient.

MAMIE POLHEMUS IS A BRIDE.

The marriage on Wednesday evening, of Mamie Polhemus and Dr. Spalding, is the fourth wedding in which we were interested, although Will and Grace Sanborn were about the only ones from this side included in the sixty-five guests. Bessie Center got the money in the bride's cake, Grace Spreckles the ring, and the bride's bouquet was caught by Bessie Ames. No one found the thimble in the cake, and, of course, no one wanted to find it, although it was a pretty gold affair. Mamie and her mother made all the pretty trosseau, with the exception of a few gowns, altogether the things are so pretty and dainty, one would imagine they came from the finest shops. The young couple are to live at home with her mother, which seems to be the thing of late.

ULTIMATUM OF MRS. STANFORD.

Mrs. Jane Stanford has just issued her ultimatum in regard to the management of Stanford University after her decease. Mrs. Stanford, who, by the way, is an ardent advocate of spiritualism, has decreed that the fee to the museum, the contents of which are largely made up of Mrs. Stanford's fans and laces and old ball gowns, is to be maintained as "a protection to valuable articles."

The "Vina" vineyard, with its enormous output of various vines, is to be continued "as long as the business is profitable." Whitelaw Reid is to succeed the late Dr. Horatio Stebbins as trustee.

SUDDEN ILLNESS OF SOCIETY GIRL.

Much gossip is going the rounds regarding the sudden illness of one of our society girls who has only recently returned from a long stay in Europe. They say that the news of the death of a well-liked young man of this town, which reached us all a fortnight ago, is the cause of her complete breakdown. They were devoted to each other, so say the gossips, but as both of them were far from strong, they did not think of marrying. She has only lately been visiting his niece on the Heights, and we were all very glad to welcome her back again. Her young sister, who was all ready to accompany her husband to Monterey, remained behind to help nurse her, but the rest of us can do nothing but just be sorry.

SWAGGER LUNCHEON FOR MISS DE YOUNG.

Amy Requa Long, who expected to go to Washington some time ago, but still lingers on, gave a very swagger luncheon for Helen de Young at "Highlands" on Thursday.

The table was covered with beautiful yellow chrysanthemums, while at each place were corsage bonquets of violets. Those at table were: Helen de Young, Mrs. M. H. de Young, Genevieve and Hazel King of San Francisco, Mrs. Alec Baldwin, Bernie Drown, Mrs. George S. Wheaton, Gertrude Allen, Mrs. Isaac Requa, Mrs. Mark Requa and Mrs. Long. Then on Friday Mrs. Long entertained about forty at an informal little telephone tea, every one coming in at 4 o'clock, to meet Mrs. Victor Metcalf and her guest, Miss Kitzmiller. Mrs. Long was assisted in receiving by her mother and Mrs. Mark Requa, of course, Mrs. George S. Wheaton, Gertrude Allen and Mrs. Charles Minor Goodall.

Mrs. Long was, by the way, the guest of honor at Mrs. Walter Dean's big dinner for twenty-eight at the Palace Hotel this week.

EVA AND HARRIET KNIGHT'S BIG TEA.

Eva and Harriet Knight's big tea for Rachel Vrooman Colby, on Wednesday, was a great success. One could hear the buzz of voices inside when half a block away! Every one was asking every one else if they were not surprised at Kate Chabot's wedding, and half a hundred other things, and the hours—4 to 6—fled like minutes. White chrysanthemums were used principally for decorating, while pretty greens were festooned about the gas fixtures and in the corners, and the dining-room was so packed that it was difficult to see anything in there, except that the white and green candelabra was very pretty.

Mrs. Colby wore her wedding gown, and all those who were members of the bridal party wore their pink gowns. There was a large receiving party made up of Mabel Gray, in a very pretty pale blue gown, Mrs. Francis Musser, Elizabeth Gray, Ida Carmany, Mrs. I. Emmet Nicholson, Emma Mahoney in white with pretty trimmings, Mrs. George and Mrs. Charles Rodolph, Marion Everson and her sister, Mrs. Arthur Goodhue, Mrs. Robert Knight, Mrs. Lee Cole Burnham in black, Beatrice Vrooman and her sister, Mrs. Cleveland Forbes, Elsie Fry, Mrs. J. E. Farnham, Elsie Farnham, Mrs. F. A. Allen, Mrs. Al Knight, Mrs. Fred Knight, Mary Wilson, Mrs. Edward Campbell and her sister, Georgia Strong. Among those in the crowd I noticed Mrs. Prentiss Selby in black, Maude Edith Pope in light feathers and chiffons, Evelyn Craig, Mrs. Charles E. Parcells in pale pink with a hat to match, Mrs. Alexander Marx, Mona Crellin with a very swagger long cape that had New York or Paris stamped inside, I know, Ella Sterett, Lottie Allardt, Mrs. Fred Allardt, Mamie Barker, Jane Rawlings in pale gray, Florence Hayden with her pretty pink chiffon boa, Mrs. William Cooke, Mrs. Jack Hampton in her latest gown, a swell white affair, Mollie Conners, Chrissie Taft in a long pale violet or lavender cloth gown or coat, that had an air of Sara Bernhardt's gowns, one doesn't quite know what they are, and Chrissie looked like a long clinging poster girl, Sarah Pratt of New York, Louise Mahoney, Mrs. Hall, Elsie Bennet, Mrs. Richardson, nee Gage, Mrs. James G. Allen in a lovely combination of pale tan and blue panne, and Minnie Dyer.

FASHIONABLE DOGS IN NEW YORK.

Every fashionable dog in New York is holding a reception at the Madison Square Garden these days, the occasion being the Second Annual Show of the Ladies' Kennel Association of America. Over sixteen hundred canines of high degree are being shown on the benches, and the pedigrees of some are longer than those of their owners. The show is a big society affair, with Mrs. James Kernochan, the president of the Association. Mrs. Charles K. Harley of San Francisco, who a year or so ago, was the stunning Titian haired Florence Deming, and who has some warm friends in Grace Sanborn and others on this side, astonished the lovers of the bull dog, by an exhibit, Ivel Damon, which she sent all the way from San Francisco, and which won three first prizes and was reserved to the dog selected as winner of the championship medal.

MRS. BELDEN GIVES TEA.

The Belden tea on Thursday was one of the prettiest I've seen for many a day, and the decorations the most lovely.

Dozens and dozens of big white chrysanthemums, together with potted palms, were used in the living room, yellow chrysanthemums and palms in the hall, and tall grasses and pink roses were placed about the billiard room. But the dining-room was the prettiest of all, where garlands of green wreaths and yellow chrysanthemums were tied with big colonial bows of pink tulle. On the center table were the same hued flowers, together with pink candelabra. The Belden calling list is a long one, and when Mrs. Belden, Louise, Mrs. Harry Belden and Charlotte Laws got all their friends together in those rooms, there was a crush, and just turn to the new Blue Book for their names, I couldn't begin to name them all!

Those in the receiving party were: Mrs. Frank I. Kendall, Mrs. Roland G. Brown, Mrs. Lillian Brown Everets, Florinne Brown, Mrs. Charles E. Palmer, Mrs. William Gardiner Cooke, Mrs. George H. Wheaton and Mrs. George S. Wheaton, Mrs. E. B. Beck, Mrs. H. C. Davis, Mrs. Alfred von der Ropp, Mrs. William Bailey, Mrs. Harry Farr, Mrs. Franklin Bangs, Mrs. H. C. Morris, Minnie Bailey, Mrs. Robert L. Stephenson, Mrs. W. M. Kales, Carolyn and Anita Oliver, Anna Foster, Ruth Kales, Elsie Marwedel, Edith Beck, Ella Sterett, Martha Coffin, Bessie Palmer, Lucretia Burnham, Ella Wenzelberger, Jean Howard, Irene Bangs, Edith Selby, Elise Wenzelberger and Cordelia Bishop.

WILL MARRY IN FEBRUARY.

As noticed in these columns last week, the wedding of Miss Eloise Davis and Wallace W. Everett will occur in the latter part of next February. After an engagement extending over five years, the renewed health of the young lady has made the future possible. She has been slowly recovering for the last three years and has been able to attend the theatre and several receptions given in her honor. She has not been confined to the house for over four years, while health is now so much restored that the February wedding has been arranged. Their future home will be in Oakland, where an attractive residence is to be built for them on the northeast corner of Ninth and Oak Streets, where the old Bacon-Soule homestead is being subdivided into smaller building lots.

ENTERTAINING MRS. RICHARDSON.

A good deal of entertaining is going on for Mrs. William Richardson, formerly Bessie Gage, who is at home for a month or so on a visit with her father and sisters. She remained in Texas, which she likes very much, just long enough to celebrate her first anniversary. Many of her old friends and all of her bridal attendants are planning entertainments in honor of Mrs. Richardson. At the Vrooman wedding, Mrs. Richardson wore a white cloth gown with a white box coat, which is very becoming, though she is paler and more slender than when she left Oakland a bride.

ENTERTAINING MRS. LONG.

The presence of Mrs. Oscar F. Long always calls out a deal of entertaining, for she is so hospitable herself and entertains so much that it is only natural she should receive return hospitality. Mrs. Harry Knowles gave a luncheon to Mrs. Long last week. There were eight guests of whom I was one and we had a perfectly jolly time and a regular old gossip—not ill-natured, of course, since I was there—concerning every one.

On Wednesday night Mrs. Walter Dean gave Mrs. Long a dinner at the Palace Hotel. It was a charming affair, the decorations in autumn foliage and the beautiful red leaves of the Virginia creeper. The name cards were all red leaves and the candles shone through rich golden shades decorated with the same foliage. Mrs. Dean's guests were: Mrs. Long, Dr. and Mrs. Selfridge, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Buckbee, Mr. and Mrs. J. Downey Harvey, Mrs. Russell J. Wilson, Miss Lucie King and Captain Charles G. Lyman.

The Deans and the Requas are old friends from Virginia City mining days.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Mills, also old family friends, gave Mrs. Long a dinner last week, just as they gave one to Gen. and Mrs. Long just before their departure for Washington some months ago. Mrs. Wm. S. Wood also entertained her. I think I told you last week of Miss Gertrude Allen's tea for Mrs. Long, so altogether that popular young woman has no reason to think we have forgotten her.

Yesterday Mrs. Long herself entertained in honor of Miss Kitzmiller of Pittsburg, who is spending the summer with Mrs. Victor Metcalf. The affair was informal and a 4 o'clock at Highlands, the Piedmont home of the Requas, and the hostess was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Isaac Requa, Mrs. Victor H. Metcalf, Miss Gertrude Allen, Miss Lucie King, Mrs. George Sterret Wheaton and Mrs. Charles Minor Goodall.

Oddly enough the Longs have taken apartments in a charming new apartment house in Washington, which is called The Highlands and is situated in California Avenue. Isn't that an odd coincidence? Mrs. Long will not take her children East with her but will leave them at Highlands for the winter, much to the satisfaction of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Requa.

LUNCHEON TO MISS CRAFT.

Mrs. Carter Pomeroy of San Francisco gave a luncheon in honor of Miss Craft and Mr. Deering last week. Mrs. Pomeroy's other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Norman McLaren, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Sherman, Miss Bettie Ashe and Miss Carter.

On Wednesday Mrs. W. R. Wheeler gave a small tea in honor of Miss Craft, who is being very generally entertained and finds her days very full between these things and preparations for her approaching marriage. From Saturday to Monday Mr. Richard M. Hotaling will entertain Miss Craft, Mr. Deering and a party of friends at his country place in Marin County, Sleepy Hollow.

A NOVEL HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

Miss Mabel Craft gave a rather unique Hallowe'en party at her home in East Oakland last night. Each guest was asked to come prepared to tell a ghost story and on entering the rooms there was found to be no light except that which came from a driftwood fire. After the guests had been properly prepared with the ghostly light of Snap-dragon whose blue and green flames made every one look perfectly ghastly, the ghost stories began according to lot, the guests sitting about the open fire on cushions or low chairs. Prizes of books of ghost stories were awarded to the best stories, both for the story itself and for the manner of telling. The stories were interrupted by the entrance of a ghost and after the excitement had died down the guests adjourned to the dining-room for a chafing dish supper. Here the decorations were Jack o'Lanterns and red and yellow flowers, the name cards being unique.

Fortunes in walnut shells, various eerie objects passed about under the table and Hallowe'en games at midnight completed a most unusual evening's entertainment, after which hostess and guests went to the city for the bal masque of the Daughters of the Confederacy. Miss Craft's guests were Dr. and Mrs. Russell H. Cool, Mrs. Lucie May Hayes, Miss Florence Ives, Mr. Frank P. Deering, Mr. Richard M. Hotaling, Mr. Jack Wilson, Mr. John Housman and Mr. Charles K. Field.

THE SMITHS IN NEW YORK.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Smith have left Shelter Island and are at 100 William Street, New York, where they will remain for a couple of weeks. They expect to return to Arbor Villa in the neighborhood of the twentieth of November, and will spend the winter and spring in California. Miss Mae Burdge is still abroad and nothing is said of any date for Marion Smith's coming out. She is too busy a girl and too serious minded to go in for the frivols of society to any great extent.

THE KINGS IN BRUSSELS.

Mrs. Charles H. King and her daughters, Pearl and Mildred, are doing Europe something after the fashion of Phineas Fogg, though, even if they have not much time in any one place, they are getting a great deal out of their travels. They spent twelve days in London, had many letters of introduction and saw the historical sights very thoroughly. Since then they have been covering an extensive itinerary on the continent and in the winter will go up the Nile. They are having a delightful time.

MISS LOHSE'S ENGAGEMENT.

Miss Anita Lohse's engagement is not exactly a surprise, as it had been generally understood among her friends. She is a very charming and attractive girl and Mr. Gregory comes of excellent stock. Mrs. Taylor will entertain in Miss Lohse's honor and the wedding will not take place until spring.

MISS DE YOUNG'S GOWN.

Miss Helen de Young was the attraction at Donald V. Graham's studio at a little tea last Saturday afternoon. Miss de Young wore a very unusual gown of yellowish gray and is really a remarkable looking girl, though not pretty. Her Parisian dress was drawn in some way under the arms so that it gave a decollete effect, but of course was not. Mrs. de Young sang some French chansons. The affair was very jolly and entirely informal.

ACROSS THE BAY.

The Misses Roney are spending the winter in San Francisco, where they are the life of the old Kate Johnson house in which lives another Oaklander, Mr. Walter Rutherford. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ross also live in this big house with its beautiful big rooms.

DELIGHTFUL TEA IS PROMISED.

A tea that promises to be quite as delightful as the Belden affair, but which will have an added interest, will be that of Mrs. Montell Taylor for her sister, Anita Lohse, to take place on Friday, November seventh, the hours 3 to 5 o'clock. Mrs. Taylor will then formally announce Anita's engagement to David McClure Gregory, and congratulations will flow from all sides, for Anita—whose dark prettiness is in direct contrast to her sister's blondness—is very well liked by all the younger set, who will, no doubt, entertain her a lot now. The groom-elect is a son of Mrs. H. P. Gregory and the late H. P. Gregory, and is a grandson of the Rev. David McClure, for whom he was named. He is an extremely nice fellow, has travelled a lot and at one time attended school in Germany and at Lucerne, Switzerland. He is now mining in Tuolumne County, but manages to get away once in awhile to see his dainty little fiancee. The Lohses are over at "Bide-a-Wee," Mill Valley, just now, but expect to return to town some time in November, and the wedding is to take place at the family home on Webster Street, during the spring months. Mrs. Taylor and Anita are to be assisted in receiving on Friday next, by Jane Crellin, Clarisse Lohse, Mrs. Henry Nichols, Alice and Ruth Knowles, Ione and Pauline Fore, Eleanor Warner of San Francisco, Emma Mahoney, Charlotte Laws, Mrs. Edwin Taylor, Mrs. George Hammer, Bessie Palmer, Helen Davis of San Francisco, Chrissie Taft, Sarah Pratt of New York, Mabel Gage, Mrs. George Gross, Mrs. Richardson, Gertrude Allen, Mrs. James P. Dunn, Claire Chabot, Mrs. John Henry Dieckmann, Jr., Mrs. Robert Knight, Mrs. Charles E. Parcells, Mrs. Harry Farr and Edith Gaskill.

BACK FROM WEDDING TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs. Havens nee Gertrude Goewey, who have returned from their wedding trip to Europe, brought back many lovely things for their new house in Berkeley, and they are planning to entertain, too, so we will see all the lovely things. They got their dining room furniture in Italy and the drawing room chairs and table in France, where they also picked up many lovely vases and all sorts of bric-a-brac.

DINNER GIVEN BY MRS. FOLGER.

Mrs. Ellen Folger gave a small dinner one evening this week for Mrs. George Augur, some of her guests having been Mrs. George Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Coghill, Nellie Cook and Mrs. John Stanly. The Athearn Folgers have closed their home across the bay, and have gone to their country home for a portion of the winter. Mrs. Folger and her little girls, Claire and Evelyne, have all been sitting for portraits, to Clawson, and they will probably be shown at one of the exhibitions.

BIG LUNCHEON IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Mrs. Fred Stolp, Mrs. John Adams and Mrs. Irving Lewis were the only Oaklanders present at Mrs. Clarence Martin Mann's big luncheon and theatre party of Wednesday of last week. Mrs. Mann is to entertain again at luncheon on Thursday, November 20th, when she has asked eighteen to meet Mrs. John W. Phillips, formerly of East Oakland, at the Palace Grill. Only matrons will be present, with the exception of Ada Russell of Alameda, who has just returned from Europe.

WILL GIVE A BIG TEA AT FERNSIDE.

Instead of entertaining at Century Hall, as they had planned, Mrs. Cohen, Mrs. Charles Lyman Bent and Mrs. Gerritt L. Lansing are to give their big tea at "Fernside," Alameda, on Tuesday next, and society on both sides of the bay—from the Presidio, particularly—will be out in full force. While the new home isn't to be compared to the old "Fernside" as it was before the fire some years ago, still it is very roomy and comfortable—you know they built on to the bowling alleys and everything that was left—and the beautiful old gardens and trees are still there.

ELEANOR DAVENPORT LOOKING WELL.

Eleanor Davenport is looking very well since her return from Europe, and we had a very good time at the little tea she gave across the bay this week, for her cousin, Miss Anderson, who came out from the East to stay with the Davenports for a time.

MR. AND MRS. JACK JOHNSTIN.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Johnston are being made much of in Los Angeles, and when they get into their own little flat on the first—that's today—will very likely give some little dinners and suppers on their own account. Miss Ella Clark gave a big theatre party for Berenice on Monday evening, followed by one of the gayest suppers of the early season, everything was delightfully informal and the whole affair so charming that no one thought of leaving until the wee small hours, at least so some one wrote to BENEFIT BY PARISH LADIES.

The Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Columbia's Parish has completed arrangements for the benefit of the parish, which will take place on Monday evening, November 3d, in Klinkner Hall, corner Fifty-ninth street and San Pablo Avenue. The entertainment will consist of vocal and instrumental music, recitations and literary selections of a high order. A mirth-provoking play, "Who Spoiled the Broth," will be given by a San Francisco troupe. The entertainment will terminate with a dance. Refreshments of ice cream and cake will be served in an adjoining hall.

The evening was delightfully spent by the seventy people present. The German Erntricht Singing Club was present in a body and rendered some excellent selections. Currlin acted as toast-master and acquitted himself in a highly satisfactory manner. The singing of C. Dietel and H. Kleinenbroich was unusually good.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansen received many handsome presents from their friends, and altogether the event was a most enjoyable one.

GREAT MEETING AT CENTERVILLE.

COUNTY CANDIDATES ARE GIVEN ROYAL WELCOME IN THE COUNTRY.

Centerville reviewed its allegiance to the Republican party last night in the most enthusiastic and loyal manner. The hall was artistically decorated with patriotic colors and the portraits of the national standard bearer and Dr. George C. Pardee. The audience filled the hall to overflowing. Many were compelled to stand on the steps outside the doors to hear the message of the candidates. During the three hours the meeting was in progress the enthusiasm of the assemblage never lessened. Every mention of the name of Dr. George C. Pardee brought cheers to the lips of the people.

One of the most appreciated features of the evening was the singing of the Elks' Quartet, composed of Messrs. Dowdle, Hart, Ayers and Learn. They responded to a dozen encores.

Harry Lynch, candidate for Superintendent of Schools, was given a rousing reception. He pledged his home town to give the greatest vote in its history for Pardee and the entire Republican ticket.

The meeting was called to order by F. M. Smith, who made a very happy introductory speech. He stated that he had risen from the ranks of labor and gloried in the fact that he had been rocked in the cradle of Republicanism. He paid a high tribute to the county candidates, stating that they had made the cleanest political fight ever held in Alameda county. The speaker brought down the house when he stated that each and every one of the candidates was making a personal fight for Harry Lynch, candidate for Superintendent of Schools.

JUDGE MELVIN.

Judge Henry A. Melvin was the first of the candidates to address the audience. He was cheered.

JACK COOK.

J. P. Cook, candidate for County Clerk, was introduced and was cheered to the echo. When he could be heard he said:

"I wish to congratulate the people of Centerville on their rousing Republican enthusiasm. A more flattering reception the county candidates have not received during the entire campaign. We will be disappointed if any precinct in the county gives a greater majority than Centerville.

"The Republican Convention acceded to the wishes of Centerville and of Washington township when they placed Harry Lynch on the ticket as the nominee for Superintendent of Schools. The Republican ticket is a ticket of favorite sons. Every Assembly District and township in the county is represented on the ticket. It is a ticket of which Alameda county can well be proud. Every man on the ticket will do his duty. Eden, Washington and Murray townships want their favorite sons elected. The way to get it is to vote the straight Republican ticket. If the country helps the city, I will vouch for it that the townspeople will help the country."

J. CAL EWING.

County Auditor J. Cal Ewing, candidate for re-election, was the next speaker. He was enthusiastically received. He said in part:

"The gentlemen of the opposition have taken occasion to criticise me because I have played baseball. I have played baseball and am now employing sixteen men to play baseball. If that incapacitates me, I wish to state that for forty-five months my books as Auditor have balanced to one cent. That is what the people wish—books which balance. Any candidate can only promise that much. The same pledge I made four years ago I now renew.

"I wish to speak a couple of words for two good friends of mine, Dr. George C. Pardee and Frank C. Jordan. They both should receive as large a majority as a county is capable of giving."

ARTHUR FEIDLER.

County Treasurer Arthur Feidler was next introduced. He evoked a storm of applause.

JOHN ALLEN.

District Attorney John J. Allen was the next speaker to address the audience. He was well received.

SHERIFF ROGERS.

Sheriff Oscar L. Rogers was the next candidate to make the acquaintance of the voters. He was given an enthusiastic greeting.

JAMES BARBER.

County Tax Collector James Barber, candidate for re-election, was next given an opportunity to speak to the audience. He spoke in part as follows:

"This meeting certainly is enthusiastic enough to be a source of great gratification to the candidates. In a meeting like this is seems almost unnecessary to ask the citizens to support the Republican ticket. I have been your Tax Collector for a number of years. I have tried to perform my duties faithfully. I believe I have succeeded. If you agree with me, I will be pleased to have a favorable report from you next Tuesday."

JOHN MITCHELL.

Supervisor John Mitchell was given an ovation lasting several minutes when he arose to speak. He said in part:

"My friends have so ably come to my defense where I have been maliciously attacked by scurrilous circulars that it is almost needless for me to say anything. The charges made against me are easily refuted. They have been refuted. I am not here to apologize for my record. I am not ashamed of it. An attempt to injure me has been made by telling only one-half of the truth relative to my voting for a reduction of $135,000 on the Contra Costa assessment. That was in 1897. The Board of Supervisors did that under the advice of the District Attorney. The circular does not state that every year since then I have voted against any and all reduction."

OTHER SPEAKERS.

Speeches were also made by E. C. Prather, Attorney Harry Pulcifer for Coroner Mehrmann, George Gray, candidate for Public Administrator, Harry Lynch, candidate for County Superintendent of Schools, Robert Girling, candidate for Recorder, and John G. Mattos.

LOCAL CANDIDATES.

Judge Sandholdt and Constables Joe Rhoderick and S. B. Vandervoort were each called upon for short speeches. F. B. Thompson, candidate for Justice of the Peace, was unable to be present, but was spoken for by the other candidates.

F. J. MURPHY.

F. J. Murphy, the speaker of the evening, closed the meeting with a ringing Republican speech which roused much enthusiasm.

The Dane's old tower, we caught anew
The sharp salt-burdened breeze that blew
Across the reach of sand.

Too proud! the grace you scorned to do,
Where scarce your foot could stand;
'Twas but from sheer fatigue, I knew,
You gave your hand!

How well that scene comes back to view!
Your cheeks' faint rose fanned,
The gorge, the twinkling seaward blue,
The black boats on the strand;
I gave you all my heart, and you—
You gave your hand. Austin Dobson.

SWORN RECORD REFUTES A CAMPAIGN LIBEL.

The Campaign Canard of Henry Dalton Against John Mitchell Exposed and Stamped With Falsity.

John Mitchell the Republican candidate for Assessor has issued the following circular:

LET THE FULL RECORD SPEAK

"To the Voters of Alameda County:

Henry P. Dalton, having sent through the mail to the voters of Alameda county, an emasculated copy of the records of the Board of Supervisors with the purpose and intent of misrepresenting my action as a member of that board on the question of assessing the franchise of the Contra Costa Water Company in 1897, to the end of furthering his candidacy at the expense of my reputation and good name, I herewith present to the fair-minded people of Alameda county a full and complete report of said record, certified to by the County Clerk, which record has been so distorted as possibly to mislead many.

The complete record of the Board of Supervisors at the meeting of July, 1897, on the water company's application, purported to be quoted by Mr. Dalton, reads as follows:

"Applications, 8, 9, 10, 11.

"Contra Costa Water Company.

"Supervisor Roeth moved that each of the four applications be reduced to the sum of $1.00, AND THAT THE ASSESSOR BE REQUESTED TO NOTIFY THE ASSESSOR OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO THAT THE FRANCHISES ARE ASSESSABLE IN THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO AS PER OPINION OF THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY. In each case the motion was seconded by Supervisor Wells, and each application was ordered reduced by the following vote:

"Ayes—Supervisors Church, Mitchell, Roeth and Wells.

"Noes—Talcott.

"State of California.

"County of Alameda—ss.

"I, FRANK C. JORDAN, County Clerk of said county and ex-officio Clerk of the Superior Court in and for said county, hereby certify that I have compared the above and foregoing copy with the original portion of the minutes of the Board of Equalization of the meeting of said board on Monday, July 19, 1897, and that the same is a full, true and correct copy of such original in the above entitled matter and of the whole thereof, as the same now remains of record, and on file in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

"Witness my hand with the seal of said Superior Court affixed, at the city of Oakland, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1902.

"(Seal.) FRANK C. JORDAN,
"County Clerk.
"By R. T. BAKER, Deputy Clerk.

"THE MATTER IN CAPITALS IS OMITTED IN MR. DALTON'S CIRCULAR.

"Its omission was, of course, no accident. The manifest intention was to convey an erroneous and false impression.

"I want my entire and complete record as a public official of this county to be an open book before all the people, but I resent, and believe the fair-minded people of this county will resent, so bold an attempt to distort a public record. That record shows that instead of my voice or vote or influence ever having favored the escape of the Contra Costa Water Company or any other corporations or individuals from their just share of taxation, it has always been registered to the contrary.

"Further facts, fully attested below, to be borne in mind by the voters of Alameda county in regard to my record as Supervisor, in this connection, are as follows:

"In 1898 I had no opportunity of going on record at all on the matter of the reduction of the Contra Costa Water Company's franchise assessment. Why? FOR THE SIMPLE REASON THAT HENRY P. DALTON DID NOT ASSESS THE FRANCHISE AT ALL. Why did he not assess it? Evidently Dalton himself followed in 1898 the advice of the District Attorney of the year before, to the effect that the water company's franchise was assessable only in San Francisco. What other excuse had he?

"Again in 1899 I had no opportunity to go on record in the same matter. Why? Because Assessor Dalton assessed the franchise of the water company only in the amount of TEN THOUSAND dollars and the company asked for no reduction. But why this beggarly low assessment of a franchise which the Assessor had previously estimated to be so valuable?

"In 1900 the Contra Costa Water Company absorbed its rival, the Oakland Water Company, and thereby became a monopoly. Mr. Dingee becoming president. In 1900 Henry Dalton assessed the franchise of the Contra Costa Water Company and on the motion to reduce the assessment I VOTED NO. Again for the year 1901 on a similar motion I VOTED NO.

"For the third time in succession, in 1902, the water company applied for a reduction in its franchise assessment and for the THIRD TIME I voted NO. In none of these years, 1900, 1901 and 1902, does the record show that the water company applied for reduction on its property assessment. Herewith appears the certificate of the County Clerk's office to the facts stated:

"State of California,

"County of Alameda—ss.

"I, Frank C. Jordan, County Clerk of said county, and clerk of the Board of Equalization in and for said county, hereby certify that the minutes of said Board of Equalization show that neither the Oakland Water Company, nor the Contra Costa Water Company filed any application for a reduction of assessment on either property or franchise during the meetings of said board in 1898 or 1899.

"That the minutes of said board for the years 1900, 1901 and 1902 show that Supervisor Mitchell voted in each instance against the application of the Contra Costa Water Company for reductions on the assessments of their franchises.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the county of Alameda, this 25th day of October, A. D. 1902.

"(Seal) FRANK C. JORDAN,
"County Clerk."
"By FRANK E. BROWNING, Deputy Clerk."

"The postponement of the issuance of Mr. Dalton's circular until the eve of election may possibly prevent this reply from meeting the eye of MANY of the voters, and I must therefore depend upon the American spirit of fair play on the part of those whom it does reach, to set me straight with their neighbors and friends against the misleading effect of the Dalton circular of misrepresentation of recorded facts.

"Respectfully submitted.

"JOHN MITCHELL."

FAHRENHEIT THERMOMETER.

Sir Samuel Wilks, writing to Knowledge, gives the history of the origin of Fahrenheit's thermometer, which is generally used in this country. It was really invented by Sir Isaac Newton, and the starting point of his scale was the heat of the human body. Newton's paper is to be found in the "Philosophical Transactions" for the year 1701. He describes his instrument as a glass tube filled with linseed oil, and to it he attached a scale to measure the degree of heat of the liquid into which he plunged it. His lowest point was that of freezing, as his highest was that of boiling water. He chose for the starting point on his scale the heat of the human body, and this he called by the round number 12, and duodecimal system being then in use—that is, he divided the space between the freezing point and the temperature of the body into twelve parts. He further stated that the boiling point would be about 30, as is was nearly three times that of the human body.

A few years afterward, when Fahrenheit was working at the subject of heat, he took Newton's instruments for his experiments, but finding the scale not minute enough he dived each degree into two parts, and so made in 24 degrees instead of 12. He also did more, for, finding he could obtain lower temperatures than freezing, and notably that of ice and salt mixed together, he took this for his starting point. It was from this point he began to count 24 degrees up to body heat. This made, by his measurements, 8 the point of freezing. Boiling point he made 53. It then became zero, freezing 8, body heat 24, and boiling water 53. This was really the same as Newton's, only the scale started lower and the numbers were doubled. Later on, finding that he could measure increments of heat more minutely, Fahrenheit divided each degree into four parts. It will now be seen that if the numbers just mentioned are multiplied by four we have the thermometer which is now in use.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

DUTIES OF THE "PET" SHEEP.

Out at the abattoir the "pets" among the sheep may be distinguished by their superior height and shapeliness and by the intelligence of their expression. The pets are murderers. In the other pens sheep come and go by thousands to the slaughter, but the pets remain. They are trained to lead their fellows to death, and they do this work well, for they have by reason of their strength, intelligence and beauty a great influence. When the butchers of the abattoir wish to slaughter a flock of sheep word is passed to the pets, and they indifferently, calmly saunted in among the flock, gain their confidence and esteem and then take their places at their head and lead them to the slaughter house. The blood-stained and murderous pets have more than one unsheeplike quality. They eat pretzels and pie and drink beer.—Philadelphia Record.

THE HUGHES CLUB CONCERT.

MRS. J. LLEWELYN WILLIAMS, WHO CHARMED THE AUDIENCE AT THE HUGHES CLUB WEDNESDAY EVENING.

The second concert of the sixth series given by the Hughes Club last Wednesday evening at the First Unitarian Church, was the leading musical feature of the week.

These concerts have become very popular, and are eagerly looked forward to by lovers of first-class music. The last concert was above the average, consisting of a selection of five numbers, which were admirably rendered. The soloists from the club were: Mrs. J. Llewelyn Williams, Mrs. Orin Kip McMurray, Mrs. Robert W. Foyle and Miss Julia Johnson. The club was also assisted by Mr. A. Horatio Cogswell, who sang in his usual masterly manner.

The especially excellent feature of the evening was the "Air and Variations," by Proch, as sung by Mrs. J. Llewelyn Williams. Her runs, trills and catches were excellent and her technic exceptionally fine. Mrs. Williams is an Oakland girl, born and raised at 202 East Ninth street, where she still lives. She is the daughter of Mr. George Chase, former County Treasurer of this county. During the past three years Mrs. Williams has been the soprano of the First Unitarian Church of San Francisco. We hope to hear her more frequently in Oakland in the future.

The solos by the other members of the club were excellently rendered, and taken as a whole the last concert

CONTRA COSTA'S LICENSE ORDINANCE

NEW REGULATION ADOPTED BY COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

The ordinance below was passed by the Board of Supervisors unanimously, after a few months of co-operative work by the churches, through church temperance committees, under the leadership of Rev. L. L. Abbott, temperance evangelist.

Committees were formed in the local churches, and these federated together through a County Central Committee, thus forming the Church Temperance Federation of Contra Costa county.

The salient points of the ordinance are these:

The prospective saloon keeper must get the endorsement of fifteen citizens and property owners of his school district, before his application can be entertained. The application, with the names of its signers, must be published one month. If there is a protest by a majority of citizens and property owners of the school district, the license may not be granted.

This is counted by experts a strong law, and was gotten in a county hitherto considered as thoroughly dominated by the liquor interests. It shows what can be done with a little faith in God and a concerted action of the churches.

COUNTY ORDINANCE.
ORDINANCE NO. 85.

AN ORDINANCE TO LICENSE AND REGULATE THE SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Contra Costa do ordain as follows:

Section 1. That every person, firm, or corporation in the County of Contra Costa, who, at the time of the taking effect of this ordinance, shall be engaged in the business of selling spirituous, malt, fermented, or intoxicating liquors or wines in quantities less than one quart, and every person, firm or corporation in the County of Contra Costa, who shall thereafter engage in such selling must, before doing so, obtain a license therefor as in this ordinance provided, which license shall not be granted for less than one year, and for which said applicant shall pay one hundred dollars per year, yearly in advance.

Section 2. Every applicant for license to sell spirituous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquors or wines in quantities less than one quart, must present a petition to the Board of Supervisors signed by such applicant, which petition must state in substance that such applicant is desirous of obtaining a license from the License Tax Collector authorizing such applicant to sell spirituous, malt, fermented, and intoxicating liquors or wines, in quantities less than one quart, and the petition must particularly describe the location of the building, tenement or place in which such selling is proposed to be carried on. That in case a license shall be granted he or she will keep an orderly and respectable place at which such selling shall be carried on; that no fighting, quarreling, or disorderly conduct shall be permitted therein. That no game of chance shall be played therein with dice or cards or money or checks; that no spirituous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquors or wines shall be sold or given, either directly or indirectly, to any minor under eighteen years of age, for his own use, nor for the use of such minor's parents, guardian, or any other person; nor to an habitual drunkard, an intoxicated person, or an Indian, and pray that an order be granted to such applicant for such license. Such petition must also have endorsed thereon a certificate signed by fifteen freeholders each of whom must be a resident elector of such school district within which such selling is carried on and must be to the following effect:

State of California, County of Contra Costa, ss.

I do hereby certify that I am acquainted with (naming applicant) petitioner named in within petition; that he or she is a person of good moral character and a suitable and proper person to be intrusted with the business of selling spirituous, malt, fermented, or intoxicating liquors or wines, and that I verily believe that if a license be granted as prayed for a strict compliance will be had with all the promises set forth in said petition. I further certify that I am a freeholder and resident elector of ——— school district, in which the applicant desires to carry on such selling.

——— ———
(Signatures of freeholders and electors.)

Provided, that no petition shall be entertained or license granted to any person whose place of selling shall hereafter be located within five hundred feet of a public school house.

Provided also, that said petition shall be presented at the first regular meeting in each month of said Board of Supervisors, and must lie over to the first regular meeting in the next succeeding month, during which time it shall be published at least once in the official proceedings of the Board; provided that petitions for renewal of licenses under the provisions of this ordinance shall be filed at least one month prior to the date of expiration of such license; and if at the next regular meeting of said Board of Supervisors there is a protest presented to said Board of Supervisors signed by a majority of the freeholders that are resident electors of said school district the Board may in their discretion refuse to grant said license. If no such protest is filed at the next regular meeting of said board of Supervisors after the filing of said petition, the said Board may in their discretion then and there grant said petitioner a license to sell spirituous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquors or wines in quantities less than one quart; and the Board cause an order to be made to the License Tax Collector authorizing him to issue a license to the applicant to sell spirituous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquors or wines at the place and in the quantity less than one quart; and no license shall be issued by the License Tax Collector to any applicant without the order of the Board, attested by the Clerk, or a certified copy thereof.

Section 3. The petition must be accompanied by a deposit of one hundred dollars to be applied in the payment of one year's license, if the petition be granted, and returned if the same is denied.

Section 4. The License Tax Collector, upon receipt of said order of said Board, or a certified copy thereof, and on the payment to him of the sum of one hundred dollars for such license for one year, shall issue to such applicant the required license for the term of one year.

Section 5. The Board of Supervisors shall at all times have jurisdiction and control over all licenses issued by authority of this ordinance, and any license so issued may, in their discretion be revoked as in Section 6 of this ordinance provided; and from the time of such revocation all the rights and privileges thereunder or the license to sell spirituous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquors or wines shall cease and such license shall be thereafter null and void.

Section 6. In case it shall be made to appear to the Board of Supervisors by complaint, or otherwise, that any person, firm or corporation, licensed by the provisions of this ordinance to sell spirituous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquors or wines, is not keeping an orderly and respectable place of business, or that fighting, quarreling, or disorderly conduct is permitted at such place of business; or that such spirituous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquors or wines are being sold or given away, either directly or indirectly, to any minor under eighteen years of age, for his use or to be used by such minor's parents, or guardian, or for any other person; or to an habitual drunkard or to an intoxicated person; or to an Indian; or that such licensee is not a fit or proper person to be intrusted with such selling, or that the licensee has obtained a license in his own name for the benefit of some other person; or it shall appear from any cause reasonable, proper or necessary, the Board of Supervisors may issue a citation signed by the Chairman of this Board and attested by the Clerk under the seal of the county, directed to licensee, and shall state in general the cause of which the citation is issued, and to require the licensee to be and appear before the Board of Supervisors at a time and place therein mentioned, and show cause, if any he have, why his license should not be revoked. The citation shall be served by the sheriff of this County in the same manner that a summons in a civil action is served, and not less than ten days before the set for appearing, at the time set or at such time as the hearing may be continued. If it shall appear from the evidence produced that the licensee has been guilty of the breach of the condition of his license under this ordinance, or if any other sufficient cause appears therefor, or if such licensee so cited shall have failed to appear, the Board may enter an order in its minutes revoking the license of such licensee, and from the time of such revocation such license shall be null and void.

Section 7. No license granted by authority of this ordinance is transferable, nor does any such license authorize the selling of spirituous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquors or wines at any other place than that specified in the license; except in the case of removal by the licensee to another place in the same school district, in which event the licensee shall obtain the consent of the Board of Supervisors for such removal; and if the licensee shall obtain such consent he shall not be required to take out a new license.

Section 8. No license shall be required of the manufacturer to sell his own production at wholesale.

Section 9. The license to sell spirituous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquors or wines at a County Agricultural Fair Grounds during the continuance of such fair shall be twenty-five dollars.

Section 10. The provisions of this ordinance shall not be construed as affecting any license in force at the time of taking effect of this ordinance; but such licensee may continue business under such license for the time it was issued, the same as though this ordinance had not been passed, but to continue said business thereafter a license must be obtained as provided by this ordinance.

Section 11. All ordinances and parts of ordinances in conflict with the provisions of this ordinance are hereby repealed.

FRANK MOFFITT CALLS PARIS GREATEST CITY ON EARTH.

Oakland Man Tells What He Saw in London, Rome and Berlin—Kisses the Blarney Stone and Listens to Legends of Killarney—Meets Cousin of the Lord Mayor of California.

"There is just one complete city in the world, and that city is Paris," said former Senator Frank J. Moffitt, speaking of what he saw during his recent European tour. "People may talk about London and Berlin and Vienna and Rome, but none of them compares with Paris. New York, I believe, to be next to the French metropolis, and if any city ever takes the place of Paris as the world's capital it will be New York, but at present it is far behind. Nowhere else is such perfection in everything seen.

"In gratifying a desire I have cherished for years of visiting the famous places of the Old World, my imagination led me straight to Paris. It eclipsed all my expectations. The reality outstripped the pictures I had drawn in my mind. There human taste, ingenuity and public spirit have reached the highest perfection. Paris is not only beautiful and magnificent, it is the most wonderful creation of man's hands on the earth.

"Crossing the Atlantic on the Kron Prinz, the ocean was as calm as the bay of San Francisco. It was like going over on the Oakland ferry, except that the Kron Prinz is an immense floating palace with all the luxuries and conveniences to be found in the finest hotels. At Cherbourg I took a rickety train, not at all comparable to the passenger trains on first-class American roads, and in six hours was landed in Paris. The ride through the valley of Normandy is charming. The country is fertile and tilled like a garden. The roads are as clean as a floor and lined with trees, while the hedges are neatly trimmed, and the fields under the highest state of cultivation. I never saw anything more lovely or more prosperous looking in my life. We passed many places historically associated with William the Conqueror. He reigned here nearly a thousand years ago, and is still the chief historic figure of the region, and many places are pointed out to the traveler where he performed some deed or fought some battle.

VISITS NAPOLEON'S TOMB.

"We got to Paris at midnight, and the first thing I did was to get a cab and drive to the tomb of Napoleon, situated at one end of the Hotel des Invalides, the splendid hospital for disabled soldiers that he founded. I was determined that this should be the first object of interest I visited in Paris, and I am glad I did it. Subsequently I found many things indicative of the grandeur and genius of the great Emperor. His monument is an exquisite structure, but the magnificent building beside it is a better one, for it is an institution that testifies to his devotion to the soldiers who followed him so faithfully. But I found that Napoleon had left an indelible impress on France in a thousand ways—on the code of laws, the roads, the harbors, and the public institutions such as hospitals, art galleries, libraries and monuments. He developed the best sugar industry and gave a direction to scientic and technical instruction that has placed France at the head of all other nations. Everywhere it is told that Napoleon did this or founded that. He literally recreated France after the old order had been wrecked and trampled under foot. It is proper that the pilgrim turn his feet first to the tomb of this mighty spirit.

"I met many American acquaintances in Paris, among them M. H. De Young. I was agreeably surprised when I saw him. One of the evening papers said he was in ill health, but that was all wrong, for I never saw him looking better or in more cheerful spirits. But De Young is something of a crank, for he is perpetually hunting curios and works of art to send out to the museum in Golden Gate Park. When I met him he had been spending the whole day buying some historical cannon to ship out. Enriching the Park museum is a passion with him, and he likes to drag his friends about with him in search of relics and mementoes of interest.

"It is a common impression in this country that Paris is a city full of wickedness. That is nonsense. It is a notion people get because there is no humbug about the Parisians. If you want wickedness you can find it in plenty and of infinite variety. It is seductive and appeals to the depraved tastes of all lands. But Paris is no more a wicked city than it is a holy city. It is full of beautiful and holy things, and you don't have to search for them. On every side you see the highest development of human aspiration and the human intellect. The prurient literature is mostly sold to foreigners, and the places noted as being wicked are mainly patronized by visitors. These things are in Paris for people coming abroad to seek them. But so are the rare art treasures, the splendid churches, stately monuments and the magnificent public buildings. Paris is full of things that exalt the soul and captivate the imagination, things which instruct and please, and which prove that its inhabitants are rich in culture and have high ideals. They are the most patriotic people I ever saw, and their love for their children is tenderness itself. When a man tells you about how wicked Paris is, ask him how beautiful it is and how noble are its monuments and its institutions. The wickedness is the wickedness of the great cosmopolitan city everywhere.

NOTRE DAME CATHEDRAL.

"I was much impressed by the treasures of the Cathedral of Notre Dame, the most famous church in Paris. It is to Paris what St. Peter's is to Rome, or St. Paul's to London. Medieval St. Denis on an island in the Seine is the ancient burial place of the French kings, but has lost its distinction since the abolition of the Bourbon monarchy. The treasures in Notre Dame are worth many millions of dollars. The Cathedral itself is one of the grandest ecclesiastical edifices in the world, but is not considered by art critics to be as fine a type of architecture as the Cathedral at Rheims. It is situated on the banks of the Seine, of which it commands a splendid view. I was surprised to find so many poor people worshipping in this splendid Cathedral. It was incongruous to see the very poor praying amid such splendor.

"I went to the top of the Arc de Triomphe, which is situated on a commanding eminence. One gets a superb view from this magnificent memorial erected by the first Napoleon to the achievements of French valor. It is modeled after the famous arch erected in Rome by Constantine the Great. From here you get a good idea of the lay of the city and the location of many points of interest. There is also a lesser Arc de Triomphe, built on the same model. It is beautiful, but not so imposing. The great arc far surpasses the one built by the first Christian Emperor of Rome.

"We drove out through the Champs de Elysees to the Bois de Boulogne, the great forest park of Paris. The Champs is certainly the finest driveway in the world. It is lined with splendid trees, which are guarded by the authorities as if they were holy. It is said that Parisians have more respect for the life of a tree on the Elysee or in the Bois than they do for the life of a human being. Those stately trees fully repay the care bestowed upon them. The Bois is a noble park. In it are a great number of restaurants, where the finest eating can be had in the world. The grace, delicacy and cleanliness of those eating houses harmonize with the sylvan surroundings. They wear a perpetual holiday air. Thousands are daily seen dining there, and I saw ladies sitting at the tables wearing jewels worth millions. It is all very gay without being boisterous. There is not the slightest disorder. Just before entering the Champs de Elysees is the Place de la Concorde, an immense open place, as large as ten blocks square in Oakland, studded with monuments, with a memorial arch in the center. In this spot the Guillotine did its deadly work during the Reign of Terror of the first revolution. The different columns represent the cities and provinces belonging to France. In this place is exhibited the sentimental character and patriotic feelings of the French people. The column representing Alsace and Lorraine, the provinces torn from France by Prussia, is kept decorated with flowers as if it were the tomb of one newly dead. Every Frenchman feels a sense of personal bereavement over the loss of those provinces. It was a little odd to see this sign of public mourning continuously displayed.

WHERE FOOTE PASTED TRUMAN.

"I was very fortunate in getting apartments looking out on the gardens of the Tuileries and the palace and galleries of the Louvre, filled with countless art treasures of priceless value. One can walk in them for days and not see a tithe of the objects of interest, pictures, statuary and bronzes of every description, representing the art of every nation and every age. The Palaise-Royal is a pathetic reminder of the complete passage of the Bourbon monarchy. This home of the ancient Kings is now given over to cheap lodgings and small trinket stores, patronized mostly by foreigners. On the main boulevard it is a common thing to see fully five thousand people, fashionably attired, sitting on the sidewalk, listening to the music and drinking coffee and sipping ices. This would look hoodlumish in America, but the best people in Paris do it.

"In the Hotel de Ville Paris has the finest city hall in the world. It is an immense palace. The French take great pride in their public buildings. In all France I dont think you can find a shabby or an inartistic public edifice.

"I visited the Luxumbourg Palace and saw its wealth of sculptures, and also the Cluny Museum, which is spoken of locally by Billy Foote as Tom Clunie's Museum. We went to the sacred spot where Foote smote Ben Truman and reverently removed our hats while we bedewed the holy ground with tears in memory of that historic fistic encounter, where the gory vintage of California was shed in deadly broil. I understand the authorities intend erecting a monument as a memorial of that episode.

"The Latin Quarter and the Bastille, on the site of which stands a column, attracted my curiosity, but are not specially interesting to the sightseer. The Latin Quarter is the haunt of the students, who come from every part of the globe to study. It is a place full of memories, and associations, but it appeals to sentiment more than the eye.

"Of course I went to the top of the Eiffel Tower. Also to the Pantheon, under which are entombed the heroes of France. The paintings in the Pantheon are beautiful beyond conception. They all relate to St. Genevieve, the patron saint of Paris, and the walls are covered with pictures representing the marvellous things she performed, her wonderful cures, and her deeds of mercy. Another interesting structure is the Church of the Madelaine, where the bodies of Charles Fair and his wife lay in state till they were shipped to America. It is copied from the pagan temples of Greece, and from the outside has no resemblance to a church. In its whole vast length there is not a window. It was built, I was told, as a place of sacred refuge in times of riot and revolution, and in the days of the revolution thousands sought safety within its walls. The Grand Opera House is a marvel. It cost $20,000,000. Beyond comparison it surpasses anything of its kind in the world. It was built and is maintained by the government, and is dedicated to operatic music.

A HINT FO ROAKLAND.

"I rode in the underground cars, and then I realized that the scheme of F. M. Smith, the Borax King, of tunnelling under San Francisco Bay is not only feasible, but is the proper thing to do. The underground tunnel in Paris is porcelain lined, brilliantly lihted by electricity and ventilated perfectly. There is no dust, no smoke and no dirt. Everything is as clean and fresh as a parlor, and there are no delays. For cleanliness and convenience the surface cars do not compare with them. If we had a road of that kind under the bay the trip between Oakland and San Francisco would not take half the time, and the waits at the ferry house would be obviated. Mr. Smith's scheme is the greatest thing ever proposed, and it is sure to be carried out some time.

"At Versailles, a short distance from Paris, where the Bourbon kings used to reside, I found many things to interest me. It is full of mementos of Louis XIV and of Marie Antoinette, but what struck me most was the paintings of the famous battles. There I saw a picture of every great battle in which the French were victorious. In France they try to forget battles they lost. While there I learned an interesting fact about our own Washington, with which I think most Americans are not acquainted. Washington is a popular hero in France, and his picture appears at Verseilles as a French commander, which in truth he was. When Louis XVI sent General Rochambeau out with an army to assist the colonies in the American Revolution, it was necessary to get around a law of France which forbade any French general to serve under a foreign commander. It was quite out of the question for Washington to serve as a subordinate of the French general. So, adopting a suggestion of old Ben Franklin's, King Louis commissioned Washington a Lieutenant General in the French army, and as such he commanded the troops under Rochambeau. Therefore in French military history the battle of Yorktown was a French victory, and Cornwallis surrendered to a French general.

"I couldn't begin to describe the sights of Paris, for it is a work of months to see them all, and I shall not try.

THE FRENCH LIKE AMERICANS.

"The French people are very fond of the Americans. I happened to be in the Casino Theater in Paris when Miss Lois Fuller was giving her famous dance. As Miss Fuller's exhibition is one of the most artistic and attractive things in the world, I do not wonder that the French people went perfectly crazy. They cheered her, applauded her and kept her on the stage until I wondered at her endurance. The fact that Miss Fuller was an American who pleased the French, and I felt rather proud of her myself. But the French are not always complimentary to us because some of our ways appear foolish and strange to them. We are apt to speak of Frenchmen as crazy, but we have none the best of the French. In France they call us "crazy Americans," and there is quite a good reason for it. To give you an idea in a small way I speak of the matter of tipping. It is pretty hard for an honest American to give anyone a tip of less than a quarter. Over there they tip a few centimes. When it takes 100 centimes to make a quarter, you will understand how small the tip is. Americans go through and buy things simply because they are odd. New York City furnishes just as many beautiful things as Paris, but it is the oddity that takes the American dollar.

"Some idea of what it costs to live in Paris may be had when I tell you that a peach at the Armonouville Restaurant cost ten francs or two dollars, —and the peaches are worth it, for I never saw or ate such fruit in my life. In horticulture the French excel all other people, and the superior excellence of their fruit is due to scientific propagation and cultivation.

"One can keep pretty well posted on European events by reading the Paris edition of the New York Herald which reaches every little town in Europe as quickly as transportation can get it over.

"It is no trouble to find people who can communicate with you in any part of Paris and an American twenty dollar gold piece speaks the language of any country in the world.

ST. PETER'S IN ROME.

"I went to Rome in the wrong time of the year, and found it very hot. As we ran through the south of France, the country seemed perfect. Its loveliness must be seen to be appreciated. After passing through the Alps we came to Turin in Piedmont, the ancient capital of Savoy. I was surprised to find it a magnificent modern city, progressive and up-todate. Thence we ran down between the Mediterranean Sea and the marble cliffs of the Appenines leaving Genoa to the right and Florence to the left, till we came to Rome. St. Peter's was the first place I went to see. It is an unwritten law that the tourist must visit St. Peter's the first thing he does in Rome and visit it again the last thing before going away. I was no exception to the rule. St. Peter's overwhelms you when you first enter, and then its vastness grows on you as you begin to realize the immense distances within its walls. no one can imagine its vastness and grandeur without seeing it. Within its walls are to be seen the masterpieces of the world's greatest artists. The powers of the brush and the chisel have been exhausted in the interior decoration. In fresco are allegorical pictures of sacred scenes and subjects by the hands of the old masters, among them Raphael and Michael Angelo.

"A fit companion to St. Peter's is the Vatican, the palace of the Pope. It is an enormous structure, within which the Pontiff holds regal state. It is also full of art treasures, and reeks with the handiwork of Michael Angelo and Raphael.

"I visited the Pantheon, and walked over the Forum, where Mark Antony delivered his oration over the bier of Caesar, and paid my respects to the tomb of Romulus, the fabled founder of Rome, not forgetting a tip to a descendant of the Gracchi who had forgotten who his ancestors were. I saw the Colosseum by daylight and moonlight, and it was certainly once a marvelous structure. Think of an amphitheater capable of seating 87,000 people! It is a ruin now. Many historic structures in Rome have been allowed to fall into decay or have been despoiled by vandal hands, but the Romans have begun to realize that these historic remains are their richest possession, and they are now preserving and restoring them.

"Just outside the walls of Rome is St. Paul's, the second church in the world. Only St. Peter's exceeds it in size. If St. Peter's did not overshadow it, St. Paul's would be one of the marvels of Europe.

"I spent an hour in the Catacombs, where they used to bury the dead, escorted by a monk, who told me many legends of this abode of the dead. The law now forbids any interments within the city limits. So strict is this law that the last Pope, Pius IX, could not be buried in St. Peter's where the Supreme Pontiffs have been interred for nearly two thousand years. When the present Pope dies he will have to be buried outside the Holy City, unless the King of Italy grants special permission to lay his remains in St. Peter's. In case permission is granted it is likely to raise a great disturbance.

"The Scala is one of the sights of Rome. It is a narrow stairway, up which the pilgrims climb on their knees muttering a prayer on every step. A string of devotees were going through this performance while I was there. The famous Appian Way, along which Caesar came after the defeat and death of Pompey, is a narrow little thoroughfare paved with Belgian blocks. It runs straight to Naples.

THE PLACE OF SKULLS.

"I was never in such a hideous place in my life as the cemetery underneath the Church of the Capauchins, where they used to bury the friars of the Capauchin order. Its walls, arches, ceilings and pillars are built of human skulls. They grin at you in myriads from every side. It was a revolting sight, but it is only a show place now.

"The arch of the Emperor Constantine, who made Christianity the prevailing religion of the Roman Empire, is an object of interest, but it is far inferior to the copy erected by Napoleon in Paris.

"It is a strange feeling that comes over one to be in a city as I was in Rome and see men and women looking like people we see at home, all rushing about their business and ready to do business, but to whom you can not speak.

"I did not see where Europeans dressed very different from Americans. In the suburban districts in Germany, the women wear occasionally wooden shoes, but it is the exception. Wooden shoes are not so bad either. I tried on a pair.

"I missed seeing Father McSweeney by a couple of days. He had been in Rome, but departed just before I arrived. I would have been delighted to have seen him, for he could have told me many things about the Eternal City not found in the guide books, and a sight of his friendly face would have been like a letter from home.

"Beads are on sale everywhere in Rome. Every tourist buys some. I brought home a lot that were blessed by the Pope as is attested by the signature of the Cardinal Secretary to His Holiness.

"The beggars of Rome beat anything I ever saw. They are as thick as flies. A beggar boy will follow a caravan on a run all day. His endurance is remarkable, but a couple of coppers satisfies him. It is hard work begging in Rome, but they seem to like it.

"Rome is overrun with monks, an order of the church below that of a priest. They are shoeless and almost clotheless. They live by begging and struck me as being a great nuisance. They are there, however, and alive and must be cared for.

"Most of the fine palaces of Rome are built from stone taken from the Forum and Colesseum. I stood at the place where Brutus stabbed Caesar. It was not in the Forum as is generally believed.

"From Rome I crossed the Alps again by way of Turin and proceeded to London. Its chief characteristic is its immensity. Many of its fine buildings are hard by squalid alleys, and a large part of it seems thrown together. But London is a great city. They are behind over there in nothing, though they are a little slower. They have a different way of doing things from the Americans, but they get there just the same. We have nothing "on" John Bull.

OFF FOR LONDON.

"Some things don't come up to your expectations, however. I had been led to believe that English roast beef was the best thing of its kind to be had any where. The roast beef of old England at the Carlton Hotel cost about five times as much as at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, and is not half so good. By the way, the Palace Hotel in San Francisco is quite as good as anything in the line I saw in Europe.

"St. Paul's Cathedral is not so large nor so beautiful as St. Peter's, but is one of the great church buildings of the world for all that. In it are columns to the Duke of Wellington, Lord Melbourne and Sir Charles Napier. As all Americans do I went to Westminster Abbey and the Tower of London, which is said to have been the site of a fort in the days of Queen Boadicea, afterwards a Roman fortress and lastly a keep of the Normon conqueror. Its authentic history begins with the Norman conquest. It is full of quaint armor and arms, and contains relics of every notable event in English history for more than six hundred years. It is a vast pile, now preserved as a sort of museum.

SITS IN JOHNSON'S CHAIR.

"At the Cheshire Cheese I sat in the chair that was once the favorite seat of Dr. Samuel Johnson. The Cheshire Cheese is an old inn, once the favorite haunt of Dr. Johnson, Goldsmith and other kindred spirits. It is patronized now mostly by Americans, who come in great numbers to the place because of its literary associations.

"The Houses of Parliament are thrown open to visitors on Saturdays, and I took them in to see the workings of English legislators. They are imposing structures, but the methods of the House of Commons are not so dignified as our Congress.

"I tried to look through the British museum, but concluded I couldn't get through with a six months' job in two days. It contains a wonderful collection of things that interest. The Bank of England, London Bridge, Black Friars' Bridge and the port and docks around Fleet street all interested me, but I could only give them a hurried attention.

"The Strand and Waterloo bridge in the west end are well worth seeing. Particularly so is Trafalgar Square and the Nelson column. Pall Mall, Piccadilly and Regent street were sights I shall never forget. They give you an idea of the vast population of London. I drove through Regents' Park, which you cannot enter without a coachman in livery. The Albert memorial erected by Queen Victoria in Hyde Park in memory of her husband is a splendid structure. Regent and Hyde Parks are about the finest in the world. The private mansions around Hyde Park are palatial, suggesting opulence and splendor.

"I drove out fifteen miles to the Star and Garter and had dinner. Fully five thousand teams were out there the Sunday of our visit. It is a magnificent place, but the dinner was not particularly good. After you have been in Paris, London cookery doesn't hit the right spot. The table in English hotels is not as good as in New York, and is far behind Paris.

A DIRTY DICK'S.

"I went to a place called Dirty Dick's. It's an odd sort of joint, built in 1745, and is referred to by Dickens in "Household Words." There is a pathetic story about how it became known as Dirty Dick's, but its too long to tell now. I took in all the London theaters. The London music hall beats anything of its kind on either side of the Atlantic. At the Hippodrome I witnessed the most realistic exhibition I ever witnessed on the stage. A six-horse coach drives on a bridge which gives away with a crash, letting horses, coach and passengers go floundering in the water. At this juncture the hero plunges in and saves the heroine with the usual result of "bless you my children," and a fee to the parson. Its a howling success, too.

"On getting to London I speedily found that there are two kinds of English—London in English and American English. They are about as much alike as an Irishman's brogue is like "Yon Yonson's" lingo. It is not without difficulty that the newly arrived American understands London speech. They seem to have caught it from the fog over there, for an East London costermonger's gab is hardly more intelligible to an American than Chinook.

"The English people refer to the Americans as 'Yanks.' Those Europeans, who have not seen the tall buildings of America or who have not seen pictures of them, do not believe you when you tell them that there are buildings by the score twenty stories high in this country.

"In London they simply overdo you with politeness. It is 'thank you,' 'thank you,' 'thank you'; if you meet a person on the street and turn out as you ought to, you are greeted with thank you. It is thank you, when you get into a hack and thank you when you get out. The cabmen in London charge you all you will stand for, but in Berlin, it is quite the other way. They have a law there which compels hackmen to carry what is known as a 'tax meter.' It indicates the number of miles you have ridden, the number of minutes it has taken and exactly what you have to pay. It is marked as plainly to you as the nickle in the slot machine registers the amount of your gamble.

DUBLIN A FINE CITY.

"Leaving London, I went to dear old Ireland. Landed at Dublin, which I found to be a thoroughly up-to-date, modern city, full of life and business activity. Its electric car service is as good as anything in America. The view up Sackville street, from the O'Connell bridge, is unsurpassed. The monuments to Daniel O'Connell and Lord Nelson are quite the equals of anything of the kind in Europe. The general postoffice and the Bank of Ireland, formerly the Houses of Parliament, are magnificent conceptions of architecture. Trinity College and College Green are highly interesting, and the National Library of Science and Art is not surpassed in Europe. When I looked around at the splendid buildings and costly private mansions, I wondered why people spoke of Ireland are poor, for all round me I saw the evidences of wealth.

"St. Patrick's Cathedral is one of the finest churches in Europe. Jonathan Swift, the celebrated satirist, was once its dean. Phoenix Park will compare with the finest parks in Europe. The spot where Cavendish and Burke were murdered is marked by a monument. All Irishmen unite in condemning that horrible deed, and it is universally spoken of with shame and regret. Kingston, the port of Dublin, and Kilkiney Hill are at the approach of the city, which lies back from the sea on the Liffey, and are exceedingly interesting. Probably the largest porter brewing house in the world is in Dublin. Guinness' porter, the best brewed, is made there. The establishment has yielded a score of immense fortunes.

'After seeing the sights of Dublin, I took the train for the south of Ireland. A ride of six hours brought me to Cork, the land of blarney, sweet Killarney and golden butter. Ireland well deserves to be called Green Erin, for it is the greenest country I ever saw. It is a rich dark, glossy, velvety green. Even the rocks are coated with green moss and the shrubgrowth has a dark-green foliage that corresponds with the emerald landscape. Unfortunately, much of the richest land is given over to pasturage, the landlords preferring to raise cattle to having tenants who object to rack renting.

IN DEAR OLD CORK.

"Cork is a thriving, active little city, with several fine hotels, where the service is good and the table excellent. While I was there a world's' fair was in progress that would have done credit to a city ten times its size. Ex-Mayor Phelan of San Francisco visited Cork just ahead of me, and I heard of him whereven I went. He visited the Lakes of Killarney, kissed the Blarney stone and acted like a true American gentleman of fine old Irish stock. The Irish are all glad to see an American. Just say you are from America and you've friends galore, ready to share what they have got with you and fight for you if neecssary. I am sorry to say that too many of them can spare hard knocks better than anything else, for the people of the south of Ireland are poor and discontented, but, strange to say, rollicking. They love America and Americans, and everybody there seemed to feel as sad about McKinley's death as we did when he was killed.

"I took a jaunting car and started for Blarney castle. The driver, who was also a guide, was named Cronin, and a handy, ready-tongued chap he was, too. He was quite well educated, and had a stock of stories that he related with great drollery. Cronin had two great desires unfulfilled. He wanted to come to America and fight England. It was his ambition to get money enough to bring him to this country.

A STORY OF O'CONNELL.

"Cronin told me many anecdotes about The O'Connell. By the way, the father of Catholic emancipation is always called The O'Connell in Ireland. He is never referred to as O'Connell or Daniel O'Connell, but by the term which signifies chieftainship. O'Connell was a great wit and the Corkonians delight in relating how he bested in repartee all who ever crossed swords with him. Here is one of Cronin's stories of him.

"Once O'Connell walked into the great London establishment known as the Universal Providers, and was asked what he wanted.

"'I don't think you have got what I want,' he said.

"'Oh, yes, we have anything you wish to call for,' was the reply.

"'I'll bet you a sovereign I can call for something you haven't got,' rejoined O'Connell.

"The bet was made and the Irish statesman said at once:

"'I want a second-hand coffin.'

"It was easy money.

"On the way to Blarney Castle, which is now a ruin, he told me that whoever kissed the Blarney stone could never be surpassed in wit or eloquence.

"'That's 'why,' said he, 'that the men of Cork bate the world makin' love and spakin' in Parliament.' Cronin had kissed the stone.

"Then he recited a poem, written by an Irish preacher, about the magic properties of the Blarney stone. It was rather long, but Cronin gave it all in fine style. This verse will convey an idea of how the theme was handled:

That whoever kisses,
Oh! he never misses to grow eloquent.
'Tis he may clamber to a lady's chamber,
Or become a member of Parliament;
A clever spouter he'll sure turn out, or
An out-an-outer to be let alone!
Don't hope to hinder him, or to bewilder him,
Sure he's a pilgrim from the Blarney stone.

"Cronin related the following legend about Blarney Castle. It was hundreds of years ago the seat of an Irish Prince, known as The McCarthy. When the English were sequestrating the estates of the Irish chiefs, McCarthy's property was bestowed on an English noble. McCarthy seized the gold and silver plate, of which he possessed a great quantity, and fled. He hid the treasure in the Lake of Killarney, and the secret of its whereabouts has been handed down through the descendants of McCarthy for six hundred years. It is only confided to three members of the family at a time, who are sworn from generation to generation not to lift the plate till The McCarthy sits again in Blarney Castle.

"Cronin was as loyal a son of Cork as ever was born, for he knew all the legends about the old town, and told them in a way that showed his affection for it. I mentioned what I had seen in Dublin, and he answered with a comical look of wisdom:

"'Bublin was, Belfast is, but Cork will be.'

THE BELLS OF SHANDON.

"Then he gave me selections from Father Prout's Reliques, and pointed out to me Shandon Church with its tall spire, with its famous chime of bells on a hill overlooking the river Lea. At the foot of the hill, near the church, Rev. Francis Mahoney, better known as Father Prout, lies buried. The river he loved flows murmering by his grave, and the bells which claimed his affection in distant lands chime their musical cadences above where he rests in his last sleep. As the shades of evening were gathering, Cronin stopped the car and recited Father Prout's "Shandon Bells." I quote these two stanzas, because of what followed:

With deep affection, and recollection,
I often think of those Shandon bells,
Whose sounds so wild would, in the days of childhood,
Fling round my cradle their magic spells.

On this I ponder, where'er I wander,
And thus grow fonder, sweet Cork, of thee;
With thy bells of Shandon, that sound so grand on
The pleasant waters of the river Lea.

"Cronin had scarcely ceased before the bells began to ring for vespers, and as the chimes came floating over the evening air, while the spires and towers of the quaint old city loomed up in the gathering twilight, I felt something of the magic spell they cast over Father Prout.

"When I started to the Lakes of Killarney, I hired another jaunting-car, driven by one Martin Eagan, who was blessed with fourteen children and received the munificent wage of a shilling a day, and withal was as merry a soul as ever peeled a potato or twirled a black thorn at a fair. He was chuck full of anecdote, wit and local history, with a spice of superstition thrown in. He half believed in the Good People, as they call the fairies in Ireland, and held to the legends of the country with a loyal faith that nothing could shake.

"On the way, he jerked his thumb over toward a large double-spired church, and said 'Porter and Whisky.'

"'What do you mean?' I asked.

"'That's a Proestant church,' said he.

"'Well, what of it?' I again questioned.

"'One of thim towers is whisky and the other is porter,' he replied, with a droll twinkle in his eye.

"Then he explained that one of the towers had been built by a wealthy distiller, and that the other was erected by a rich brewer. 'So, we calls 'em whisky and porter,' he added.

HOW ROSS CASTLE FELL.

"Eagan showed his superstitious bent when we visited the ruins of Muckross Abbey, a famous monastery erected by the Franciscan monks in the fifteenth century. It must have been a splendid structure in its day. A vault in the Abbey was, in ancient times, the burial place of the families of two celebrated Irish chieftains. An immense yew tree, thirteen feet in diameter, grows in the center of the Abbey. A local superstitution has it that any person who plucks a leaf from that tree will die in a year. I was going inside, but Eagan, who had told me of the deadly character of the tree, was so afraid I would not heed his warning that he followed me in, telling me all the time to beware of the tree.

"Ross Castle is a picturesque, ivy-covered ruin. Eagan told me an interesting story of how it fell from its former high estate. It was the seat of a powerful chief named O'Donoghue, who stoutly adhered to the fortunes of Charles the First. General Ludlow, who commanded the Parliamentary forces, beseiged Ross Castle in vain, till he learned of a local legend which said the castle could not ever be taken till ships sailed up to it. In the night time Ludlow launched a mock flotilla on the lake, and the garrison seeing it in the morning, gave way to superstitious terror and yielded without a struggle. Here Eagan's superstition cropped out again.

"'The O'Donoghue comes here ivery night,' said he.

"'Why, man, he's been dead over three hundred years,' I said.

"'Och, yis, I know, but he comes ivery night, just the same, ridin' a big white horse,' persisted Eagan.

"'Did you ever see him?' I asked.

"'No, but me father and mother saw him,' and Eagan crossed himself, as if to exorcise the phantom.

"I visited the Devil's Punch Bowl, a gem of a lake on the top of a mountain, O'Sullivan's Cascade, and the Devil's Bit, a gap in the top of another mountain. Local legend has it that the devil bit a piece out of the mountain top and spat it into the Lake of Killarney. The little islet in the lake called Devil's Island is alleged ot be the bite Satan took out of the mountain.

THE LORD MAYOR'S COUSIN.

"I got into a boat to go through the rapids to the Meeting of the Waters, of which Tom Moore sang, and found that the boatman was named Pat Courtney.

"'I know a great man in America named Courtney,' I said.

"'Iudade,' said Pat, 'I've got a cousin in America, an' he's Lord Mayor of California.'

"It did not take me long to find out that the aforesaid cousin was no other than Councilman W. P. Courtney of Oakland.

"The whole lake region of Killarney abounds in scenes of entrancing loveliness. The lakes are three in number and are set in the heart of the mountains, which are penetrated by glens full of wild beauty. The lakes are formed by numerous minor lakes and streams in the mountains, and wind through the craggy peaks in a way to give the most picturesque effects. The man who wrote:

"'Angels fold their wings and rest,
In that Eden of the West,
Beauty's home, Killarney.'

"Knew what he was talking about. I never saw anything so poetic and charming in all my life. There is grander scenery, but no spot where nature is entirely so lovely. Sir Walter Scott, who loved the lakes of Scotland, visited Killarney and was so captivated that he wrote a poem about the meeting of the waters.

"In the town of Killarney the finest Irish point lace is made. This precious stuff is sold for $50 to $300 per yard.

"Kenmare House, near the lakes of Killarney, is an elegant manor house, the seat of the Earl of Kenmare, an English nobleman. When you see it and the state it is kept in you will understand why the peasant farmers are so poor. Nearly all goes to the landlord.

"Blarney Castle came very near falling into the hands of an American. It belonged to a spendthrift young absentee landlord, who proposed to sell it to anybody who would pay a big price. A wealthy American was about to conclude a bargain when one of the Guinnesses of Dublin stepped in and bought the place. He has practically dedicated it to the public, only a small fee being charged to visitors to keep the property up.

"I was surprised to see how little brogue there was in the speech of the Irish around Cork. They are all bright and are fairly well educated, too.

"In Cork I saw a fine monument to Father Matthew, the great Irish temperance apostle. There are a number of elegant public buildings in the city. Cork is the great butter market of Ireland. It is beautiful rich yellow stuff, for the rich moist herbage of the south of Ireland is splendid dairying feed. Showers are almst of daily occurrence and that accounts for the intense greenness of the vegetation.

"I took a walk through the poorer quarters of the city, and found a great deal of poverty. The poor of Ireland are very poor, but they never get so poor that they forget to be hospitable or face the world with a jolly smile. It seems that the Lord blessed the Irish with light hearts because he made them so poor. But they tell me things are getting better in Ireland. Conditions have steadily improved since Parnell's time, but where the mass of a people have been reduced to abject poverty for generations as the Irish peasantry have been the work of restoring prosperity to them requires a long period. Parnell compelled the adoption of measures that have giver much alleviation, and the agitation that he began is still going on.

"I was surprised to find how rare the shamrock is in Ireland. It is a modest plant of the clover family, flourishing only in poor gravelly soid and in the shade. I brought home some of the seed, and will try to grow the shamrock in my garden.

"After Ireland, I went to Brussels, in Belguim, taking in Ostende. I happened to arrive there at the time the Queen died and sorrow in the country was universal. Ostende, which was the gayest place in Europe at that time, actually stopped and looked more like a New England town on Sunday than anything else. It is beautifully located on the sea shore, and the wealth and style of the place are very great. The number of Americans who were there spending American money would surprise you.

"Brussels is called 'Little Paris,' because, in a small way, it is quite as beautiful as Paris. Has about half a million population with fine parks, and its Hall of Justice is said to be the finest in the world. The market place there is simply beautiful, and instead of tearing down their ancient landmarks, they strive to restore them. The city is full of Spanish architecture since the time the Spaniards possessed the country.

WHERE NAPOLEON FELL.

"I drove to the field of the Battle of Waterloo, and got a very good idea of what happened there on the 18th of June, 1815. From what one reads and hears and sees in pictures of the Battle of Waterloo, you can get a fair idea of what it was, but nothing in comparison with being there and seeing the battlefield itself. There is a museum on the ground and a large pyramid erected right on the center of the field with a lion on top, looking, in a menacing way, towards France. That was erected by the Prince of Orange after the Battle of Waterloo, to commemorate the victory. Some years later, when the French army was passing through to help the Belgians obtain their freedom, just to put an indignity on the lion, they cut its tail off and the lion now has a second tail.

"I saw the position that Napoleon had, and the advantages that Wellington had, and where one of the fiercest battles of the world raged for eight hours and victory wavering to either side about every hour. Wellington had baffled all the efforts of the Emperor, his line remaining firm and unbroken until the close of the day until the Prussians, led by Blucher in person, encircled the right wing of the French army and annihilated its rear. It was very easy by looking at the condtions on the battlefield to see how the great Napoleon finally fell.

"There are a great many English ex-soldiers there, who are guides and explain things from an English standpoint. I saw no Frenchman at all. The Belgians, though, are very fair and explain, it is said, the battle with great accuracy and fairness.

WALKS UNTER DEU LINDEN.

"Berlin was the next city I went to, and I discovered it to be one the most up-to-date cities in the world. Unter deu Linden is one of its drives, and is a beautiful thoroughfare at the head of which is a beautiful arch with a bronze trophy on top for an ornament. Napoleon had it in Paris for nine years, and finally, after the allied armies of Europe had conquered him, it was brought back to Berlin. The 'Alle' of victory is probably the most attractive spot in the world. It is a wide avenue, containing all the ancestors of the present Emperor and their chancellors. No one can tell beautiful it is. It simply must be seen. The statutes and monuments were designed personally by the Emperor himself. It is quite an interesting sight to see the German soldiers marching through the city to practice. When I saw France, it was difficult to understand how such a belligerant, brave, and war-like people could be whipped by anybody in the world, and the Franco-German war of 1870 was hard to understand, but when I got in Germany, it was very easy to understand. The Germans are a great big, cool people, bent on peace, but ready at any time for anything that comes along. I could see then why the French were irritable, excitable and not equal in warfare to the Germans. The French people run to the artistic, where the Germans run to the substantial. There are more cities in Germany with 100,000 population than any country in the world. Nearly everybody in Berlin speaks English.

"After seeing all these places, I had about ten days to spare to wait for the steamer, and I wanted to put them to the best advantage and gave Paris the benefit of them, for, as I have said before, Paris is the most beautiful spot o nearth.

"I was very glad to get back to America, and one of the best things I saw was my first glimpse of the Statute of Liberty in New York harbor. I had seen it many times before, but I have never looked at it with as much pleasure as I did when my ship sailed in to port. I was very glad to get back, although I didn't regret a day I had spent in Europe.

"There were over 100,000 Americans in Europe on the 1st of September, awaiting transportation home.

Ismar's Wonderful Prophesy
AND THE GREAT STRIKE

How a San Francisco Merchant Was Saved From Financial Ruin by Heeding Her Warning.

A WELL KNOWN SAN FRANCISCO wholesale and commission merchant, who handles nearly all the anthracite coal used on the Pacific Coast, was saved from utter ruin recently by the great Egyptian, Ismar. He was on the point of contracting to deliver many hundreds of tons of coal at a certain price, believing that the strike would end early in September.

Ismar told him that the miners would not return to work until the last week in October and that the price of coal would continue to increase until that time.

The gentleman, who does not want his name mentioned on account of business reasons, for a few weeks, decided not to make the contract. He not only prevented a loss of a quarter of a million of dollars, but began to buy for a rising market and cleaned up a small fortune. Ismar is doing many things just as wonderful as this, but along different lines, day after day.

Consult Ismar by mail if you cannot see her in person. Three questions answered for $1.00. Full life reading $5.00. Don't send currency. Send money by Wells-Fargo or Postoffice money order or by registered letter. Office 1106 Market street, opposite Cafe Zinkand, San Francisco. Office hours 10 A. M. to 5 P. M., Sundays, 10 to 12 M.

Ismar is a fixture in San Francisco. During the many years she has been in this city hundreds of would-be imitators have come and gone.

FIGURES SHOW THAT DR. GEO. PARDEE WILL WIN.

Careful Estimate of Vote by Counties —Oakland Man Sure to Lead— State Politics.

BY GEORGE F. HATTON.

(Special to the Tribune.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—It is the season of estimates. Everybody who thinks he knows anything about the political conditions is sitting down and industriously figuring out the majorities he imagines the Gubernatorial candidates will get in the various counties, and as each statistician invariably allows his personal prejudices to run away with him, the most absurd guesses have been finding their way into print during the past few days.

Of course, no one pays any particular heed to the official estimates issued at the respective party headquarters. It stands to reason that an attempt would be made to create sentiment in that fashion, and the best proof of this is to compare the figures of the Republican representatives with those issued at the Democratic headquarters. In many instances each side claims the same counties by several hundred majority, though, if the truth were told these official statisticians know that the conflicting reports they are receiving from those very places indicate that the fight should be classified as an even thing in those localities.

Another proposition that should be borne in mind during these hours of political speculation is that very few people are in a position to pass upon the condition of the State, as a whole. The individual who is using his local surroundings as a basis for his estimates all along the line is scarcely entitled to any consideration whatever, for it is plain that if the same sentiments are to be applied all over the State that appear to exist in San Francisco, then Lane has no fight at all, but is already winner by a big majority. On the other hand, visitors from Riverside, San Diego and other parts of the State express the utmost surprise that anyone should think that there is even a question as to the outcome.

"Down our way," they say, "it is all Pardee."

FEW PEOPLE TO JUDGE.

As a matter of fact, those in a position to sit in judgment upon the State situation are very limited in number. They consist of the chairmen and secretaries of the State Central Committees, the managing editors and political writers for the large newspapers and those associated with the department of the Southern Pacific, where politics are given a full consideration. The opinions of these individuals are worth something, for their knowledge is not confined to any one county or sets of counties; on the contrary, they are in touch with every part of the State. Nobody else can be, that is, not in a way that can mean much, for it is hard to get at reliable sources of information except upon the lines named.

Eliminating, therefore, all this guesswork that is going the rounds as a result of newspaper articles, betting, the talk of traveling men, stump speakers and so forth, and what do we find. The officials connected with the State organizations are naturally enough claiming victory for their respective parties. Nothing else could be expected, for, apart from the proposition that it would be dangerous to even hint at defeat, it is well known that nearly nine per cent of those actually engaged in a political fight are absolutely positive that they are going to win. Before a State or county convention is held and later on when the candidates are matched at the polls, it is next to impossible to find a loser. It is human nature for a man to think that his popularity or his record will carry him through, and no matter though to others it is an absolutely sure thing that he will be defeated as far as his position in it is concerned.

The judgment of those representing the State organizations can therefore be said to be too warped to be reliable. Even the figures they have to deal with partake of the same trouble, for they get their estimates from the chairmen of the various county committees, who in turn cannot see how the work they have been doing can result in failure. So much, therefore for official estimates.

NEWSPAPER OPINION.

In the newspaper offices they have a much clearer idea of what is happening, that is to say, wherever they have adopted a system of having privately exactly what is going on. As far as what appears in the columns of the newspapers are concerned, everyone knows that it is colored to suit the policies of the papers—such a thing as actual happenings being eliminated from campaign journalism. The managing editors and political editors are frequently, however of a different party faith to that of the papers on which they are engaged, and in these instances it looks as if their minds should become well-balanced upon the proposition, for their natural predilections are countered by the sentiment they are trying to create.

It is interesting, therefore, to know that in the offices of the three large morning dailies and the two evening papers of San Francisco the vote stands three to two in the belief that Pardee will win with one of the minority inclined to line up on the long end. This is significant to a large expert as these opinions are not based upon street talk, but upon facts and reliable sources of information.

RAILROAD NEWS.

At the Southern Pacific headquarters where close touch is kept with almost every county in the State, an air of positiveness prevails that Pardee will be elected. This railroad bureau, too, would be more likely to have an uncolored view of the situation than any other collector of news, for its representatives are instructed to send in reports of actual conditions and they do so regardless of party feeling or personal desire. The statements in their possession, therefore, and their knowledge of what is to transpire at certain known points makes this particular opinion of great value, especially so as it is not created for the purposes of publication or the creation of sentiment.

After this introductory as to the little value that can be placed upon estimates, official or unofficial, it may seem presumptuous to present any thing of the kind. The figures here given, however, do not come from any one source, but rather present in a composite form, as far as possible, the consensus of opinion as it exists. There is no doubt that the majorities given will be severely criticized in specific instances by both sides, but they are given as honestly as possible, and with a desire to present the situation as far as it can be ascertained amidst the clash of opinion that is existing here. They are not personal guesses, but are collated upon reports and show anticipated majorities

It is but proper, however, to make an additional statement regarding these figures. As they are to appear in a Republican newspaper in Dr. Pardee's home county, the conclusion might naturally be jumped at that they have been slightly colored in his interests. On the contrary, exactly the opposite policy has been pursued and the showing presented is pessimistic in the extreme, and in a measure the figures are given with the object of proving that no matter how severe a pruning is given the results show indubitably that Pardee will be elected.

THE OTHER FIGHTS.

As regards the rest of the State ticket, there is scarcely a Democrat even who will not concede that the Republicans will win right down the line. There is a slight difference of opinion as regards some of the Congressional districts, but these, too, all appear to be safe for the Republicans.

In the First District Ford, the Democratic nominee, has made a vigorous canvass and will get a good vote. Outside of Nevada county, though, where he will probably reverse the existing Republican majority, he will not do much damage, and every report from the district indicates that Gillette is a sure winner.

In the Second District Frank Coombs' fight did not look too healthy for awhile, principally on account of the conditions in Sacramento county. Matters appear to have been satisfactorily adjusted there, however, and Coombs will win.

In the Third Victor Metcalf has scarcely the semblance of a fight.

Kahn will beat Livernash in the Fourth. The latter has made a splendid campaign and will get a huge vote, but the lines seem to be well seasoned around Kahn's majority.

In the Fifth Loud now appears to be safe. He has had to encounter the hardest fight in his political experience, and few know the enormous amount of work that has been done in his behalf. It has been accomplished quietly, but effectively, and the result now seems assured in his favor.

Needham will carry the Sixth by an increased majority. His new district is a hard one for a Republican to run in, but Needham is going to carry some of the Democratic counties in it and, with his own Republican strength added to this, he is safe beyond doubt.

Congressman McLachlan has a virtual walk-over in the Seventh. Nobody questions the outcome there.

Captain Daniels is a sure winner in the Eighth. Smythe, his opponent, has been very aggressive, but the district is too strongly Republican to have been in danger for a moment.

THE BETTING.

The betting is interesting in these closing hours. Owing to the predominating Lane sentiment in San Francisco, where most of the campaign speculation is conducted, he is naturally the favorite. Ten to nine in his favor are the odds at present quoted and even money can be got anywhere.

A bet of $1,000 at even money is posted at the Palace Hotel bar that Lane will carry San Francisco by 7,501. It was made a couple of weeks ago, and the holder of the Lane end has been offered $250 for his wager.

One thousand dollars even that Lane will carry San Francisco by 10,000 awaits a taker at the Palace Hotel bar.

One hundred dollars to fifty that Kahn will beat Livernash was one of the wagers of the week.

One hundred dollars even that Beatty will carry the State by 50,000 majority was bet on Wednesday.

Two hundred and fifty to one hundred—Pardee, Kahn and Loud, all three to win, is being looked for by the holder of the short end.

HE ORDERED PIE.

Sam Shortridge has gathered in a good new story during the present campaign. It is of the visit to Kentucky of Senator Fairbanks and another notable stump speaker, both of whom, unfortunately for their surroundings, were temperance men.

A typical Kentucky Colonel was escorting them to the meeting place, and en route he paused at a saloon and said: "Gentlemen, won't you take a little moisture before you go to the hall?"

"That sounds like a good scheme," said Fairbanks, and as his friend also expressed assent, the trio went in to interview the bartender.

"Gentlemen, what shall it be?" asked their Kentucky host as they lined up in front of a tempting array of bottles.

"I am a little thirsty," said Fairbanks, "and I think I'll take a large glass of Manitou water."

The Colonel looked somewhat aghast at this, but said nothing. "And you, sir?" he added, addressing Fairbanks' friend.

"I'll have an Apollinaris lemonade," was the reply. The Southerner rolled his eyes in dismay.

"Colonel, what will you take?" said the bartender after he had dished up the two temperance decoctions.

"Well, under the circumstances," remarked the polite Southerner, glancing askance at the display of mineral water, "I think I'll have a piece of pie."

CHURCH WOMEN GIVE A SOCIAL

PEOPLE OF HAYWARDS ENJOY A HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

HAYWARDS, Nov. 1.—The Hallowe'n social given last night at the Native Sons' Hall by the ladies of the Episcopal Church was a success. An interesting program of musical and literary numbers was rendered during the early part of the evening, after which games and refreshments formed the amusements of the occasion.

The women are well pleased with the result of the affair, which netted them a considerable sum. Preparations had been in progress for the entertainment for some time, and as a consequence it was conducted without a hitch. The selections were rendered by the best talent, together with some outside assistance.

REPUBLICAN RALLY TONIGHT.

To-night the big Republican rally will be held in the Haywards Opera House. The rally will be the last of the campaign for this place, and as a consequence the hall will undoubtedly be packed to the doors. Every preparation has been completed for the event. Bonfires, fireworks and music by the Haywards Band will be among the features of the evening.

Large delegations from neighboring towns will be present to-night to attend the rally, which will be the largest Republican demonstration given in Haywards this campaign.

The county candidates will also be in attendance and will address the voters. The speakers of the evening will be Hon. Elwood Bruner and Duncan McKinlay, both of whom are well known in political circles in California. They are speakers of ability and will ably espouse the principles of their party.

Preparations for the rally have been in progress since the last meeting of the Eden Republican Club of Haywards, at which time the following committee was appointed to get together sufficient amount of money to pay for the fireworks and band: H. E. Bruner, M. S. Petersen, James O'Neill, F. C. Winton, P. J. Crosby, F. I. Lemos, R. Reid, Thomas Clines, P. H. Hoare, H. Gansberger, I. B. Parsons, W. W. Meek, A. W. Schafer, G. S. Langan, Judge Prowse and Marshal Ramage. Enough money was collected to give a celebration worthy of the time and occasion.

HIS HORSE STOLEN.

Dick Wulzen recently left his horse and buggy in front of the Postoffice, and, after being gone for several hours, returned to find the outfit missing. A thorough search of the entire neighborhood failed to bring the missing animal to light. Information was sent to surrounding towns, and for several days not a word was heard from the outfit. Later it developed that a man employed on the Meek ranch found the horse near the railroad track. Whether it was stolen or wandered away is not known, but it is the opinion of the authorities that some one took the horse, and, fearing capture, turned it loose after reaching the outskirts of town.

BLOOD POISONING FROM NAIL.

Selah Langan, daughter of G. S. Langan, recently ran a rusty nail in her left foot, causing a serious wound which later developed into bloodpoisoning. For a while it was feared that the wound might result seriously, but she is now improving and all danger is past. The young lady will be compelled to use a cane while walking for some time.

REBEKAHS INITIATE.

An important meeting of Haywards Lodge of Rebekahs was held recently, at which time a number of candidates were initiated into the Lodge. The meeting was attended by a number of grand officers.

Following the initiation a banquet was served. The grand officers present were P. G., P. Alexander; P. G. P., Mrs. Berkeley; V. G., Mrs. Spotwood. The newly-elected members are Miss Neva and Grace Brown and Mrs. Niels Christensen.

LOS BANOS VISITOR.

A. Alexander, who has been teaching school in Los Banos, was a recent visitor at his old home in Haywards.

BRADLEY VISITOR.

James Gibson, of Bradley, Monterey County, is visiting his brother, Tom Gibson of this place.

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC MAY GRANT THE DEMANDS.

★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★

Kruttschnitt's Ability First Recognized by C. P. Huntington.

New Passenger Makes its First Trip Today.

Personal Mention of the Track and the Trainmen.

★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★

Within the next few days the order of Railway Conductors, Trainmen and Switchmen will submit a schedule of wages to the Southern Pacific Company.

The schedule has been in readiness to submit for the last six months, but the unions have waited for an opportune time before making their demands.

The requests of the men are very much the same as those submitted by the engineers, firemen, telegraphers and others. An increase of fifteen to twenty per cent is asked, together with a uniform rate of wages on all the divisions of the Atlantic and Pacific systems.

The demands will take the same general course the others have. They will be passed upon by the heads of the respective departments and then referred to General Manaer Alger and Julius Kruttschnitt, assistant to President Harriman. These two gentlemen in turn will pass upon the demands and send them to the committee appointed by President Harriman to confer with the men.

According to the by-laws of the organizations the Company is given thirty days in which to make an answer to the men. The engineers will be the first organization to receive a reply. The other unions will be answered in rotation. A reply is expected within ten days to the demands submitted by the engineers.

STRIKE NOT IMMINENT.

The danger of a general strike upon the Southern Pacific lines is not thought to be great. Both the men and the Company officials are of the same opinion. The heads of the departments are unanimous in saying that the possibilities of a great railroad strike are so small that it cannot be considered even as a possibility. The men hold equally pronounced views.

The reason for this belief is found in the fact that the Company has always favored unions. The conservative organizations have always had the entire confidence of the Company, and there have been no differences which have not been amicably settled. In fact the Company has lent encouragement to many of the unions. This policy has redounded to the benefit of the company. The unions have produced a superior set of employes. In the organization men who are rendered incompetent by drink or other means are not tolerated. Men desiring work must come to the officials recommended by many of the unions. Otherwise they will not be employed by the company. An engineer who is not in good standing with the brotherhood cannot obtain work. The result of the Southern Pacific's policy has been good workmen. Among railroads the Southern Pacific has the reputation of having the best mechanics and skilled employes of any railroad in the United States. The men are also better paid.

TO INCREASE WAGES.

The consensus of opinion is that the Southern Pacific will increase the wages of the men. It is not expected that all the demands will be acceded to, but the general belief is that a substantial increase will be granted all over the lines.

It is pointed out that the Company cannot afford a strike and has always made concessions in preference to bringing about general dissatisfaction. It is thought that the Company will not make the present occasion any exception to the rule.

NEVER HAD STRIKE.

The Southern Pacific has never had a strike of its own. The great railroad strike of 1894 was a sympathetic strike and was not brought about by any mistreatment of the Southern Pacific employes. Since the Company first came into existence, it has never had any serious trouble with its men and will not in all probability at the present time.

LOCAL MEN WORK HARD FOR KRUTTSCHNITT.

Local railroad men are working hard to land Julius Kruttschnitt in the Presidency of the Southern Pacific Company. From the division heads to the humble employes every one is behind the present assistant to the president and they are striving hard to secure their favorite the coveted position. The official announcement of Harriman's retirement has brought out a number of candidates for the place. Unless the Company reverses its rule to have well informed men at the head of affairs Kruttschnitt seems to have the best of the canvas so far. His qualifications are unquestioned. His ability was recognized many years ago by the late Collis P. Huntington. When Huntington discovered Kruttschnitt the latter had charge of a broken down and worn out division on the Atlantic system. It had been a burden and expense to the Company for years, but was retained merely as a connecting link to prevent some other company from obtaining control of it. When Kruttschnitt took charge of the dilapidated piece of roadway it seemed a hopeless task to attempt to straighten matters out. In a couple of years Kruttschnitt not only had the road in a good condition, but had made it a paying branch. The task required both engineering ability and business acumen of high order. In recognition of this service, Huntington transferred Kruttschnitt to New Orleans, where he directed affairs with signal success. It was not long before Kruttschnitt was called to the Pacific Coast as general manager of the Atlantic and Pacific systems. He filled that position ably and was promoted to the position he now occupies. James Agler was made general manager in Kruttschnitt's place.

When the present assistant to the president came from New Orleans he only brought one employe with him—his colored cook. All the old employes, including the division Superintendents and the heads of the departments under them were retained and advanced as rapidly as possible.

It is said that Kruttschnitt ascribes whatever success he has achieved to the fact that he has selected competent men. Every one under him who shows capability is promoted.

This is probably the reason why the railroad men on the Pacific Coast are so unanimously behind Kruttschnitt for the Presidency.

NEW OVERLAND TRAIN MAKES ITS FIRST TRIP.

The Golden Gate Limited between California points and Chicago leaves this afternoon on its first transcontinental trip. It goes by the way of Los Angeles, El Paso and the Rock Island Route to Chicago.

The new route will reduce the time between Los Angeles and Chicago by several hours. The time heretofore has been very close to 70 hours. The new train will make it in 62 hours. The time between San Francisco will be about seventy-two hours.

The train is superbly equipped. It is a model of elegance, representing the best which can be turned out of the Pullman shops. It will be pulled by the new engines, capable of making ninety miles an hour.

It has taken the passenger officials of the Rock Island road and the Southern Pacific several months to figure out the schedule. They believe they have put before the people the quickest and the most handsomely equipped train west of Chicago.

FREIGHT CONGESTION IS NEARLY CLEARED UP.

Through the efforts of Superintendent W. S. Palmer, and his subordinates, the congestion of freight on the Western Division has nearly been cleared up. The road between Oakland and Sacramento is practically clear, although it is still necessary to send freight to and from San Francisco by the way of San Jose to keep the yards from choking up.

Agent W. J. Dickinson announces that the 14,000 tons of freight which temporarily blocked traffic at Long Wharf has been cleared up and the normal stream of trade resumed.

There was never a time in the history of the Company when the scarcity of cars has been so keenly felt. Last year there were plenty of cars but in insufficient motive power. A hundred engines have been added to the Pacific System since then, but the demand for cars is still increasing. Upward of 1,500 cars have been added but this number is still found to be insufficient.

Three thousand additional cars have been ordered for next year's traffic.

THREE BALDWIN ENGINES ARRIVE FOR YARD USE.

Three new Baldwin compounds, Nos. 1096, 1097 and 1098, have arrived from the East. They are ten wheelers and will be devoted to switching duty in the yards. Their weight is 129,900 pounds.

This enormous bulk rests upon the drivers alone, giving the engine a tremendous pulling power.

STEAMER MODOC IS READY FOR SERVICE.

The river steamer Modoc, which was burned to the water's edge four weeks ago on the San Francisco side of the bay, has been entirely rebuilt by Superintendent Bruce and his men.

The vessel is now lying in the water off the marine ways and look quite handsome in its new coat of paint.

SUPERINTENDENT M'KENZIE'S NEW OFFICES ARE READY.

Superintendent of Ocean and River Steamers McKenzie's new offices have been completed at the pier. He will occupy all of the second story over the restaurant building at the mole.

PECULIAR USE OF A DESTROYED CARGO.

The cargo of the ship Pyreness, which was grounded after leaving San Francisco, is being put to a peculiar use. The cargo consisted of barley and wheat. It was destroyed for commercial purposes. It is very convenient, however, for baiting duck ponds. The grain is scattered over the surface of the water and has the desired result of bringing the water fowls to it.

INTERESTING BREVITIES FROM LONG WHARF.

Business continues extremely active at Long Wharf. There is not a vacant berth and will not be for some time. There are a half dozen vesels waiting for their turns.

The principal commodities handled are glass, cement, lumber, coke, coal and scrap iron.

The steamers Point Arena, Phoenix, Rival, Scotia, Chelalis and Redondo are discharging cargoes of Oregon Sugar pine.

The British ship Denton is discharging a cargoe of Australian coal.

The British ship Endora is discharging coke and cement.

The French bark Bauboki and the Hollendale and Glenclova are discharging cargos of pig iron, cement, glass and coke.

PERSONAL MENTION OF THE RAILROAD MEN.

The flag at the freight yards was at half mast on Friday in memory of brakeman Craig, who was killed at Elk Grove on Thursday last.

A. M. Yates, for a number of months assistant day scaler, has been promoted to the position of brakeman.

S. A. Deckord, of the car repairing department, has returned from Los Angeles where he went to recover his health. He reports himself much improved.

Judge James Quinn, Ray Baker, J. Cal Ewing and other local politicians visited the railroad yards this week in behalf of the County Republican candidates. They were well received.

Engineers R. O. Morgan, C. Dyer, and A. C. Curtice have been temporarily transferred to the Coast Division. They will return to the Western Division in a few weeks.

Boiler maker Nelson sustained a severe cut to his foot during the early part of the week. He was compelled to lay off on account of the injury.

Foreman Robert Yates, of the shops, has had several additional men put under his charge during the week.

Superintendent Bruce of the ship yards will shortly begin the construction of six barges for carrying freight between Oakland and San Francisco.

Hugh Flynn, of the blacksmith shop, was severely burned on Tuesday while working over an oil burner. His face was badly scorched. Prompt medical attendance saved the young mechanic from wearing scars where the flame burnt him.

CHILDREN ABANDONED BY THEIR PARENTS.

Judge Hall has granted permission to Edwin and Victoria Shelton to adopt Harry Dinsley and Harrold Wheeler, aged 5 and 4 years respectively. The children have been abandoned by their parents and have recently been cared for at the West Oakland Home.

BIRTHS REPORTED.

A son was born to the wife of Emmett Obensbain, a carpenter living at Twenty-eighth and Linden street, on October 25th.

A daughter was born to the wife of H. E. Longenecker, a teacher living at 1839 Berkeley Way, on October 26th.

NEW ATTRACTIONS FOR LOCAL THEATER GOERS.

Mirth and Magic at Macdonough—Melodrama at the Dewey and Comedy and Tragedy at the San Francisco Playhouses.

The attraction at the Macdonough Theater tonight and tomorow night will be Leon Herrmann, the famous magician, who is as full of fun as a school boy at vacation time and can't help his exuberance of spirits.

The Herrmanns are noted for the pranks they have played. How Herrmann fooled the Sultan of Turkey with his marvelous trick of the watch and the fishes; the story of the eggs and the Irish woman at the market, who broke open every egg she had looking for five dollar gold pieces, which Herrmann had taken out of the several eggs he had purchased from her, and the thousand and one other stories are known to every child, school boy and school girl in this country. So many wonderful things have been ascribed to these wonderful Princes of Darkness that it occasions no surprise when a new story is told. Herrmann had been playing in New Oryeans the week before last and it seems he had considerable fun in that city, due to his marvelous sleight of hand, and again some that he was not responsible for. Herrmann went to the bank of New Orleans and asked the cashier to cash a draft for him for a thousand dollars. The cashier looked him over and said:

"You are Mr. Herrmann, I believe."

"Yes, sir, I am," said the smiling magician.

"Very well," said the cashier, and began to count out the money in bills. Herrmann took them, carefully counted them over and said:

"Excuse me, but you have made a mistake. I have one hundred dollars too much."

"Oh, no," said the cashier, "that won't do; you can't fool me: the cash is correct."

"But I assure you," said Herrmann, "I have one hundred dollars too much, and I want to return it."

"Not at all," said the smiling cashier, "we never make mistakes, or if we do, we don't rectify them. If you have a hundred dollars over, it belongs to you."

"Very well," said Herrmann. "I will keep it, but it is strange. I really have too much money and the cashier won't take it. I will put the money to good use," he said, and started away.

It was suggested that Herrmann go to the French Market, and he acquiesced. Arriving there he soon had things in a turmoil. He first spied an old darkey coming along. "Where did you get that watermelon," he said, and the frightened darkey promptly dropped the watermelon and started to run. "That won't do," said Herrmann, and he grabbed him. "Been stealing watermelons again, eh?" Herrmann said, "and what's this, a roll of bills, too?" as he reached in the darkey's pocket and pulled out a bundle of greenbacks. "For de good Lo'd, dem don't blong to me how they come there?" the darky said. "Don't know," said Herrmann, "but I guess you stole them. Don't belong to you, eh? Well, here's $10," and he handed the darkey a $10 bill. "You had better get now, here comes a policeman," and the darky took to his heels.

He next stopped at an apple stand and bought some apples. He took out a knife, cut open several apples and extracted from each a gold piece. "Pretty good apples," he said, "are you satisfied with half of what I get if I buy the rest of the apples?" "Not at all," said the woman in charge of the stand, "the apples are not for sale." "Well, all right," said Herrmann, "here's half of what I found," and he handed her two five dollar gold pieces and walked away. The crowd gasped. This was new to them; finding money and giving half of it away. "Here, Herrmann," they cried, "open this," and every one had something for Herrmann to break or buy. But Herrmann brushed along, unmindful of the cries of the stall-keepers and the excitement he was creating. A blind beggar sat on a chair with a tin cup in his hand for alms. Herrmann suddenly stopped, pushed the crowd to one side and picked up several bills. "Money around loose, eh? How careless," he said, and he dropped the bills into the cup.

HERMANN AT THE MACDONOUGH.

"KING DODO" COMING TO THE MACDONOUGH.

Considerable interest attaches to the announcement that Henry W. Savage's special production of "King Dodo," the new Pixley and Luders comedy opera will come to the Macdonough next Monday, Nov. 3rd, for two nights only. The work is entirely American and ranks in the front in the list of comic operas credited to American composers. Theatre goers and newspaper readers are probably aware of the uncommon record made by this diverting musical work during the past year. It is credited with the longest run known in the history of theatre goers in Chicago, having opened there May 27th of last year and continued with uninterrupted success in one theatre up to October. More recently the production has been given two months at Dalys Theatre, New York, and returned to Chicago for six weeks. The complete production as seen in New York, with the elimination of a single feature, will be brought with its seventy-five people to the Macdonough and includes besides Raymond Hitchcock, who plays the title role, Cheridah Simpson, Flora Zabelle, Greta Risley, Margaret McKinney, Arthur Wooley, Wm. Corliss, Arthur Deagon and Albert Johre. The chorus of pretty girls is one of the strongest features of the production, in that special work has been exacted in the matter of voice, dancing and shapliness. Particular stress is also laid on the lavish scenic embellishments and costumes, which enhance the production of the many effective ensembles. An augmented orchestra of solo musicans is carried and the entire production is under the personal direction of Mr. Charles H. Jones.

"CAPITAL VS. LABOR," AT DEWEY THEATRE.

In accordance with a request made to the management "Capital versus Labor," will be revived Monday night for one night only. This very spectacular and timely piece was played to very large houses a week ago, and so great was the demand for its representation, that Manager Chapman consented to agree to the request. On Tuesday evening the great farce comedy "Confusion" will be presented under the directorship of Irvin Blunkall, who will be supported by the entire Stevens Stock Company.

"DAUGHTERS OF EVE" AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

"Daughters of Eve" is the title of an unusually strong drama, the celebrated work of A. E. Lancaster and Julian Magnus, which will be produced at the Grand Opera House during the week beginning Monday evening next. Miss Wainwright will be seen in the dual roles of Rose Wycherly and Rhoda Daintry. The drama itself is based upon incidents in the lives of some English people, and contains several strong situations. The story deals with the love affair of Rose Wycherly, who is the personification of all that is pure and ideal in woman, and the obstacles of her happiness, born out of the sensational elopement of her twin sister known as Rhoda Daintry, who is pictured as a woman of the declasse type. Rose is receiving the attentions of Robert Hawthorne, who in spite of her father's wish that he cease them, a wish caused by the action of the wayward daughter, calls on Rose and asks an explanation of the ribald joke made by some club acquaintances over one of her photographs. She spurns his request and to keep her sister's secret, though it break her heart, allows him to go away. He drinks and meets Daintry at a parvenu ball, mistakes her for Rose and heaps invective upon her. Lord Charles Talbot, the clubman who has twitted about the photograph and gay original comes in and upon being denounced by Hawthorne, strikes the latter, knocking him down. Daintry falls in love with the injured man, who is taken to her apartments and at his convalescence, implores him to return the love she bears. He reminds her what she has brought upon her sister, but forgives her. She goes away heart-broken to a convent, not, however, until she has brought Rose and Hawthorne together. The efficient Grand Opera House Stock Company will support Miss Wainwright and a production of great merit is promised.

TIVOLI PATRONS WILL AGAIN HEAR "CARMEN."

For the fifteenth week of the grand opera season, the Tivoli management will present two great operas, "Carmen" on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings, and the new opera by Puccini, "Tosca," on Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings, and at the Saturday matinee. The last named opera is done by special arrangement with Ricordi and Co., of Milan, and is one of the great modern works that has made the name of Puccini famous throughout the world of music. The story is the same as that of the great drama by Sardou, which has been performed in this country by Bernhardt, Fanny Davenport, and in Europe by Duse. The cast will include many of the Tivoli favorites. De Padova has his finest part, that of Baron Scarpia, in which he appeared at a special production of the opera in Italy, under the direction of the composer. Agostini is the Mario of the cast, a fine tenor assignment, and Montanari is the heroine, Floria Tosca. The other parts are sustained by the Paoli, Cortesi, Zani, Napoleoni, Jacques, and Miss Partington. "Carmen" will be given with about the same cast as that of the previous productions at the Tivoli. Collamarini and Russo will, of course, figure as the gipsy, and Don Jose, respectively, and D'Albore will sing the toreador. Miss Welsh sings Michaela, and Anna Wilson is Mercedes. Miss Hopkins, Cortesi, Zani, and Napoleoni make up the list of smaller engagements.

Paul Steindorff has made strenuous efforts to give the new opera careful rehearsal, and it should go well on the opening night. The scenery has been painted from the Italian models, and the chime of bells used in the piece are imported from Milan.

FRONTIER PLAY AT THE CENTRAL THEATER.

Monday evening next, War on Women, an immensely thrilling dramatic story of the Indian uprising, will be produced at the Central Theatre for the first time in San Francisco on a scale of great magnificence. Landers Stevens, the popular romantic actor, has been specially engaged to play the hero, Captain Jack Sterling, and the other important roles will be entrusted to Eugenie Thais Lawton, Georgie Cooper, Agnes Rankin, Margaret Marshall, Anita Fallon, Charles J. Stine, Thomas Keirns, George Nicholls, Edwin Emery, Ernest Howell, Walter Whipple and William Harris. Tuesday next, election day, the returns from every precinct in the city and every State in the Union where elections are held, will be announced between each act. November 10th "The King of Detectives" will be presented.

FISCHER'S OFFERS A DOUBLE BILL.

There will be many new features in addition to "Whirl-I-Gig" at Fischer's Theatre Monday night. For the past fornight the company has been rehearsing a new travesty, entitled, "Way Up East," by Richard Carle, the well known writer of musical plays, and whose many successes have made him famous. It is the burlesque on "Way Down East," said to be the funniest travesty ever seen on any stage in this country. It had a run for many weeks in nearly all the leading cities of the country. There will be enough new songs, dances and new funnyisms introduced to make up a whole evening's entertainment even without "Whirl-I-Gig." Both Kolg and Dill will play roles entirely different from those they have yet appeared in. Barney Bernard has a funny character, and the three make fun enough to satisfy the most hardened dyspeptic. Winfield Blake does a burlesque villian and Maude Amber and Olive Evans have excruciatingly funny parts. Harry Hermeusen will also appear in a new guise before the public. All the scenery and the costumes have been made expressly for "Way Up East," and the new double bill will surely continue to run for at least another month.

ALCAZAR COMPANY TO PRESENT COMEDY.

The week begining Monday evening next at the Alcazar will be devoted to William Gillette's delightful comedy, "Because She Loved Him So," which contains a pretty love story with appropriate farcical embellishments. It will be produced for the first time in San Francisco at popular prices, with new and beautiful scenery and a strong cast which will include the entire Alcazar Stock Company. Tuesday evening next, election night, the returns will be announced between each act, and after the performance till midnight. A special telegraph wire will be connected with the stage. November 10th "A Stranger in a Strange Land," will be the bill.

CLEVER VAUDEVILLE ARTISTS AT NOVELTY.

The attractions at the Novelty Theatre for the week of Nov. 3rd include the following: New moving pictures; Ada Castell Brydes, blind vocalist; Mid Thornhill, German comedian; E. J. ENDEAVORERS TO GIVE LUNCHEON.

HUNGRY VOTERS WILL BE ACCOMMODATED ON ELECTION DAY.

On election day, November 4th, an elaborate luncheon will be served by the Endeavorers of Oakland, under the management of the Ladies' Aid Societies of the churches, at the Coffee Club rooms at Ninth street and Broadway, at Fifteenth street and Broadway, and in the old library building. Any amount of good things to eat, such as chicken, jellies, hot rolls, pickles, pies, cakes, meats, fruit, etc., will be served. The Coffee Club will be open all day for inspection. The rooms will be tastefully decorated, and young ladies from the Endeavor Societies will be there to extend every courtesy to guests. A great many business men are planning to take luncheon there with their families. The funds received from the luncheons will be used for the work of the Coffee Club. There may be some entertainment in the way of stump speeches during the lunch hour.

The success of a gathering is sometimes assured when those who are to be on the program are known. The coming County Christian Endeavor Convention at the Fourth Congregational Church on November 15th is found to be of great benefit and a success when speakers like Rev. C. R. Brown, State President J. O. Smith, Giles Kellogg, Rev. H. N. Wintler, Mrs. Lillian Bupley and many others as well known will speak.

Rev. C. R. Brown will deliver the convention sermon in the evening, and it is unnecessary to say that he will have something worth hearing. Giles Kellogg from the southern part of the State will lead the consecration service. Among those who will contribute to the musical part of the service will be Misses May Lee, Catherine Peck, Ruth Waterman, Corinne Reagh, Margaret Harford, Mr. H. E. Keifer, Mr. Lowell Redfield.

Rev. H. H. Wintler, the popular young pastor of the Alden Presbyterian Church, has been chosen as toastmaster for the basket luncheon at 6 o'clock in the Gray Memorial Baptist Mission, near the convention church. Rev. Whitler is a bright speaker, and this promises to be one of the enjoyable hours of the day. These quarterly conventions are a source of inspiration and helpfulness to all who are fortunate enough to attend them, and especially if the afternoon session, as well as the evening is planned for. Often some of the best things on the program are given at the afternoon session.

The Christian Endeavor Societies in the vicinity of Centerville will hold a rally Sunday, November 2. Dr. Sarah E. Wise, superintendent of the "Quiet Hour," and J. E. White, State secretary, will be the speakers.

With a view to increasing the interest in the society meetings without in any way lessening their usefulness, Princes Gate Baptist Endeavorers, Liverpool, England, have arranged for the occasional discussion of special subjects during the winter session. These include "Lessons from Drummond" and "Tennyson and Prayer," while the biography of Dr. Patton and work on the Congo and in South America have been selected for missionary nights. It is intended that at the first meeting of the new year consecration responses and greetings should be read from all with whom it is possible to communicate who have been connected with the society at any time during the eight years of its existence, thus creating a pleasing link between the old and the new members.

B. C. CUVELLIER IN THE NORTH

COUNCILMAN TELLS ABOUT THE THINGS HE SAW IN THE NORTH.

Seattle, October 27, 1902.

Editor TRIBUNE:—Seattle is known as a "wide open" town and if one-half of the things said to exist in that portion of the city significantly designated as "across the dead line" are true, then that section of this thriving municipality must be a pretty tough place. But there is an element of decency, morality and refinement in this community which is battling for supremacy and which is in a fair way to win, for the people are graduually awakening to the realization of the fact that flagrant vice, brazen immorality and an utter disregard for common decency, are not indispensible adjuncts to commercial and industrial progress. Seattle is blessed with a wise Mayor and a good city council both of which, although elected by advocates of the "wide open" policy, are preparing a course of wise restriction and control over the disreputable elements. There can be no denying the energy, enterprise and civic spirit which are bound to make Seattle probably the second city on the Pacific Coast, but it needs the drastic application of a good dose of moral disinfectant and some of its people are preparing the dose.

Yesterday after stepping out of the barber's chair, I said to the colored boot-black whom I have been patronizing for the past week: "Now Jim, give me the best shine you've got and an extra fine brushing off, for I'm going to be good today and I'm going to church."

"You am?" queried Jim looking at me incredulously.

"I are," I replied.

He remained silent for a few seconds and started to polish. Then he stopped and looked up at me with an inquiring gaze.

"You mean it? You really goin' to church?"

"I certainly am."

He scratched his head, shook it dubiously and chuckled to himself.

"I fail to see anything funny about my going to church. Do I look like a man who has no business going to church?" I asked.

"No sah, no sah, I didn't mean no offense; but just you hear me, you'll find de church the hardest brace game you ever run up against in dis city. If you got any money dey'll git it away from you suah."

I have not the remotest idea of what a "brace game" is, and whether it is like football or ping-pong, but whatever it may be, this bootblack had evidently been up against it and had come out second best. However, his disparaging remarks did not dissuade me from my determination to attend divine service and as there is no Unitarian Church here, so far as I could ascertain, the only thing that perplexed me was the choice of the church I should attend. Luck decided the question for me. As I stepped out of the hotel I saw lying on the sidewalk a pamphlet with the picture of a church edifice on the cover. I picked it up, and this is what I read there: "Plymouth Congregational Church. W. H. G. Temple D. D., pastor. A church for the people. Strangers cordially welcomed to all services. If you have no church home, come with us. If you have a friend uncommitted to any church bring him here." So I wended my way to Plymouth Congregational Church, and I thank the luck which threw this little pamphlet across my path.

I will not undertake to quote the eloquent words of this able divine who impressed me as combining the qualities of two of our most prominent Oakland ministers, Rev. Charles R. Brown and Rev. B. Fay Mills, but the gist of his sermon was just this. Talk is cheap. Prayer is a good thing but largely a matter of sentiment. The true religion is that which goes out to lend a helping hand to those who need assistance. The most useful church is that which fights Satan in his own stronghold, which will help to find useful employment for the stranger and guide him away from the pitt-falls of vice. It is that church which goes to the new comer in the community, be it man or woman, and which says, "if you have no church home, come with us, if you have no friends here, let us be your friends; if you need help, let us help you." No wonder Plymouth church is crowded to the doors, and no wonder that those who go once go again, for these people practice what they advocate and the visitor is greeted with a a cordial welcome and a heart grasp of the hand which bespeaks sincerity and makes one feel that he is indeed among people who are willing to be his friends. If this is a "brace game," then pity it is that there are not more of the same kind.

In the Sunday issue of the Seattle Post-Intelligence I came across the following item on an educational topic which I would like to submit for the consideration of our Oakland Board of Education through the columns of your valuable and influential journal. I believe that is the proper formula to use when requesting a favor of a newspaper. Besides being worthy of the careful consideration of the elders it may possibly be of interest to some school boys and girls. Here is the item:

"THE ART OF SPELLING."

"This fall, out of 141 students who took an entrance examination in spelling for Northwestern University, 85 missed 20 or more words out of a list of 150 which was fairly selected, without special search for the unusual or the difficult.

"One of the professors comments in this showing: 'So long as the word method of spelling is taught in the public schools, just so long will boys and girls enter college unable to spell correctly.'

"What's the matter with reviving the old yellow McGuffey's speller, on which most of the present generation were educated some fifteen or twenty years ago? It began with a-b, ab, and went on to imprac-ti-ca-bil-i-ty—which was easier than it looked, as it spread across the page. If the boys and girls of the present generation come to college unable to spell, college might very well devote a couple of hours a week to matters which the primaries have neglected. Why not revive the spelling bee? Or why doesn't some philanthropic multi-millionaire who is yearning to spend his dollars for educational ends found some spelling schools? For certainly, barring errors in the queen's English, there is nothing that seems to savor more of ignorance than the ability to spell."

Talking about boys and girls, I must tell you about a lad whom I met up here a few days ago. It was while pacing the deck of that fleet greyhound of the waters, the steamer City of Everett, and admiring the beautiful scenery along the shores of Puget Sound, that I noticed a youth sitting on the railing, his head leaning against a deck post, and with a countenance which was the reflex of pleasant thoughts. I expected to see him fall overboard every moment. I tried to look at the scenery, but that boy's dangerous position worried me. At last I went up to him, and, as pleasantly as I could, I said to him: "Excuse what may appear to you as officiousness on my part, but will you please get down off that railing. I expect to see you plunge into the water at any moment. It makes me nervous and spoils my enjoyment of this beautiful scenery." He did not answer back, "Aw, go chase yourself," or words to that effect, as I expected he would, but he climbed down out of his perilous position, and with a merry twinkle in his eyes which spoke plainly his thought: "What a funny, funny old fellow," he said: "Why, certainly I will get down if my being here annoys you. Are you a stranger in this part of the country?" I told him that I was, and we were soon engaged in friendly conversation. I got from him the story of his life. But first I noticed that his raiment, though very plain, was spotless; his shoes, though heavy, were polished; his finger nails, neck and ears were clean, and he had a bright, cheery countenance that won your friendship from the start. Now listen to this boys experiences in life as told in his own words. "Yes, you are right, I am just fifteen. When I was only eight years old my mother and father separated. I hardly remember ever having had a mothers love and care like most boys have had, but my grandmother was very good to me when I was a little fellow. Hard luck came, however, and I had to go to work on a ranch for my board and lodgling; then I came to Everett and I worked in a dry goods store and in a grocery store, but through it all I managed to find time to go to school a little and to study after my work was over, because I just felt that I must have an education if I expected to get along in this world. Then papa got hold of a little newspaper in a backwoods country town of about two hundred and fifty inhabitants and he took me with him. He and I did all the work, editorial, reportorial, typesetting, presswork and distributing. That was a great help to me. You see I had to study my spelling and my grammar more than ever then, but papa helped me, for he has had a good education. (He said "papa," not "my father," nor "the old man.") After a while papa located a gold mine, and he and I go out every year and put in a few weeks doing a certain amount of work in order to hold the claim until we can get money enough by and by to work the mine properly. We are tunneling through granite, and I tell you it is hard work. Papa is working on a newspaper in Everett now and I am in the first year at the high school. See here was my first lesson to-day," and from his pocket he pulled out his Latin book and showed me his task of that day. "When I get through the high school I am going to study to become an electrical engineer. About the first of the year I am going to found in Everett a lodge of the C. M. A. Never heard of the C. M. A.? Why, that is an order which has been started in the East among the boys there, and C. M. A. stands for the "Coming Men of America."

The Coming Men of America. Well, this brave little lad deserves to be one of them. He will certainly be one of the coming men of Everett, and Everett is one of the coming towns of the Puget Sound, founded some ten years ago, having already nearly 20,000 inhabitants, electric cars, smelting works, flour mills, iron foundries, shingle and saw mills, as well as numerous other industries, and a hotel finer than anything we can boast of in our own fair city of Oakland. But just stop and think of what this motherless little lad of fifteen years has gone through in the few years of his existence. Surely he sets an example worthy of emulation. With the heart of a child, he has the experience and the knowledge of a man. He told me all about how to locate a mine and the steps necessary to take in order to secure timber lands. He was a perfect little condensed encyclopaedia of useful knowledge. Succeed? Of course he will succeed. He is one of those brave American lads whom adversity cannot discourage, whom obstacles cannot hold back. And up in this great northwestern country there are lots more like him.

DRUIDS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

E. B. STONE OF ELMHURST MOVES TO OAKLAND FOR THE WINTER.

ELMHURST, Nov. 1.—At a recent meeting of Elmhurst Grove, No. 143, United Ancient Order of Druids, new officers were elected. They are as follows: Dr. W. F. Lynch, past arch; Dr. F. P. Mitchell, grand past arch; P. M. Laing, recording and financial secretary; H. G. Clayton, treasurer; R. E. Rodifer, conductor; W. A. Ranier, inside guardian; A. Ackerberg, outside guardian; Dr. W. F. Lynch, Dr. E. P. Mitchell and L. J. Lawlor, trustees.

These officers will be installed with due ceremony on the evening of November 5th. Elmhurst Grove of Druids has been in existence but a few months, and during that time has made rapid progress. It now contains nearly as many members as any local fraternal organization and is rapidly increasing its list.

WILL OVE FOR THE WINTER.

The family of E. B. Stone are moving from their beautiful country home in this place to Oakland, where they will reside during the winter. They do not expect to return to Elmhurst until about May or June. The move was made principally on account of the children, who attend school in Oakland.

O'TOOLE IN TOWN.

J. J. O'Toole and son are visiting friends in Elmhurst for a few days. Mr. O'Toole is now residing at Napa Junction, where he has charge of the E. B. & A. L. Stone Company's storehouse. He was for a number of years a resident of Elmhurst, where he was foreman of the Stone Company's lumber yard.

GAVE MUSICALE AT SAN LEANDRO

MACHINISTS AND BLACKSMITHS PLAY INTERESTING BASEBALL.

SAN LEANDRO, Nov. 1.—The Pocock home was the scene of another delightful musicale evening on last Thursday. Professor Meyers, the well-known musician, entertained the guests with a number of piano selections which brought forth rounds of applause. The professor is a musician of ability and has given a number of very interesting musical affairs in this place. Owing to the inclemency of the weather many of the invited guests could not be present. Among those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Adams, Mr. Mrs. C. M. Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Hawes and Miss Hawes, Dr. and Mrs. Miller and Miss Miller, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Morehouse.

INTERESTING BALL GAME.

An interesting game of baseball was played here recently. The contesting teams were composed of blacksmiths and machinists from the Best Works. For a long time the relative merits of the workingmen of these two departments as baseball players has been a question that has caused considerable argument. Finally, to settle the question, two clubs were formed with the following line-up:

The game was a great one. Both sides included a number of heavyweights, and at times things grew quite warm for Umpire William Fought. To add to the interest of the game, both sides put up $20 a piece, which made the contest not wholly for glory. The fight, which lasted for some time, resulted in a victory for the blacksmiths by a score of 26 to 14. The machinists fought hard but they were no match for the burly smiths, who broke bats and nearly drove the ball through the catcher.

The game was witnessed by a large crowd, which included many outsiders who had heard of the contest between the big workmen. Every one was perfectly satisfied with the game, as it contained enough excitement to please the most bloodthirsty baseball crank.

HALLOWE'N PARTY.

The members of Golden Wave Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, gave a Hallow'een party last night at Masonic Hall. The affair was attended by nearly all the mebers of the order and a large number of friends. A program of interesting numbers was rendered during the evening, and there were many other interesting features. Refreshments were served shortly before the party dispersed.

BOY WILL SURVIVE.

One of the most remarkable accidents that has occurred in this place, in the fact that the victim did not die, is the case of George Parsons, the eight-year-old boy who was kicked in the back of the head by a horse this week. The base of the lad's skull was frightfully crushed, and several spoons full of dislodged brain matter were removed from his head, together with many pieces of bone. One of the remarkable features of the case is that the boy did not lose consciousness. On the way to the hospital from his home in this place he retained his faculties and conversed with the physician. At the hospital an operation was performed and the broken bones taken from his head. On the following morning the boy showed no signs of sinking, and later it was reported that he would live. He also received a bad cut over the left eye, which required ten stitches to close. The little fellow showed great pluck and courage during his trip to the hospital, despite the fact that his head was crushed in.

DELEGATES TO GRAND CHAPTER

Golden Wave Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, was represented at the Grand Chapter held in San Francisco Miss E. L. Rushling, Mrs. J. N. Frank, Mrs. A. H. Merritt and Mrs. William Fultn.

LARGE PARTY AT FRUITVALE.

FRUITVALE, Nov. 1.—A Hallowe'n party was given yesterday by Miss Cecil Childs. The affair took place at Laurel Grove Park and was attended by a large number of the young lady's friends.

The young people spent an enjoyable time at games and refreshments. The games consisted of sports usually indulged in on such occasions.

WILL PLAY BASEBALL.

The Fruitvale Fire Department baseball team will meet the San Leandro firemen in the latter town to-morrow. The contest promises to be an exciting one, and much interest is centered in the result. Both teams are evenly matched, and as they have already met on the diamond in a previous contest, both sides will put up a hard fight for the game.

Captain J. Bridge of the Fruitvale nine says that his men are sure winners. He has the greatest confidence their ability to again defeat the San Leandro men. Bridge is the crack pitcher for his team.

CADETS ENTERTAIN.

The members of the Fruitvale Corps last night entertained a large crowd at the armory. It was the occasion of the Cadets' annual campfire, and the program was unusually good. Each number ws applauded loudly and many were compelled to respond several times. The program included blackface specialties, male chorus, Indian pow-wow and selections by the Fruitvale Mandolin Club, of which George Lund is manager and director. The boys are greatly pleased over the success of their entertainment.

ADMINISTRATOR FILES HIS FINAL ACCOUNTING.

IMPROVEMENTS AT DECOTO.

NEW BUILDINGS GOING UP AND OLD ONES BEING PAINTED.

DECOTO, Nov. 1.—Decoto has recently been progressing rapidly. Albert Silva has gone to quite an expense in building a fine hall, of which the tow is proud. The new hall is quite large, and fitted up with stage and drop-curtain for theatrical shows. The hall has been occupied almost nightly since its completion. At present a medicine company is occupying it for a week, and presenting a good show. The baby contest has got to be quite exciting and more excitement is promised for Saturday night, when a ladies nail driving contest is to take place.

Another new improvement is the painting done on Young's store, and the old postoffice sign has been replaced by a new one.

VISIT DECOTO.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rice, formerly of Warm Springs, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Young on Tuesday of this week.

PIONEER DIES.

P. V. Dean, an old resident of this place who has been employed by Mr. Ed. Whipple for two score years, was found dead by his cabin on Wednesday morning. An inquest was held at Centerville, and the body was buried at the Decoto cemetery on Thursday afternoon. Mr. Dean was well known and was quite a familiar character of the town. The direct cause of his death is not known, but it is supposed that he died of old age, as he was past 70 years of age.

WILL GO ON CRUISE.

Frank P. Young, of the training ship Pensacola, has been at home visiting his parents for several days prior to his leaving for an eight months' cruise.

SCHOOL WILL CLOSE.

MONEY-MAKING

Enterprises are not floated every day and when one is started not every person can become a stockholder. The

OAKLAND CREMATION ASSOCIATION

is property owned by a large number of small stockholders and its affairs are honestly managed.

Operating expense is low. None of the officials, other than the Superintendent draw salaries.

The Columbarium issue of stock is now being sold on very easy terms and there is yet time to acquire an interest in the company.

This stock is a safe investment because the Association is making money, and has a bright future before it.

ADVERTISEMENTS

A Minister's Tribute

Oakland, Cal., Aug. 4, 1902.

MR. P. DEASY
Oakland, Cal.

Dear Sir:—Allow me to say a word in favor of the heater you put into my house some time ago. It is the most convenient arrangement for hot water that I know anything about. When wanting a tepid bath I find I can get one in five minutes at a minimum cost, or a hot bath in ten or twelve minutes.

We ministers have to practice economy and this is the thing to do it with, and also to relieve the housewife of the smell of oil, the dust and labor of coal and the long waiting for the boiler to get hot.

You may refer to me at any time for recommendation.

Yours truly,
ALFRED BAYLEY.

Deasy Heaters cost only $10.00 or $12.00—according to pipe needed. This also includes setting up.

LITERARY NOTES OF THE WEEK

NEW BOOKS AND PERIODICALS FROM THE EASTERN PRESS.

John Habberton, the author of that famous little book, "Helen's Babies," has written another work in which two little girls, instead of boys, are the central figures around which hovers a young Western girl, who has been given the charge of the darlings for a time. "The Tiger and the Insect" are the names given the children and the book alike. They are the pride of a young couple in New York.

The story opens in much the same way as does that of Helen's Babies. A Western girl, sister of the mother of the "Tiger" and the "Insect," goes to New York to assume charge of the children for a little while. The introduction of the babies is soon accomplished, and immediately the author produces a "baby talk" that made his other work noted.

Before many pages are read the lover appears to the young lady, who has the temporary charge of the "young animals," and, of course, many embarrassing scenes are pictures, all brought about by the mischievous children. During the absence of the children's parents, they send telegrams constantly giving instructions as to what the children should be given and what not.

Many pathetic situations, as well as the ludicrous, are in the chapters and the children are constantly proposing something that is sure to result disastrously for their young relative.

After she has managed to keep the two little girls from meeting with any serious mishap, the young lady receives word that her sister and her husband have decided to prolong their stay, and, greatly to the delight of the Tiger and the Insect, she once more resumes her guardianship.

Of course before the children's parents return the inevitable happens, and all through the unconscious efforts of the children, their cousin becomes engaged to the man that the children's parents had selected for her.

The volume is larger than that of "Helen's Babies," and although it is written in much the same style and with the same plot, it is distinctly different and is exceedingly interesting to all classes of readers.

It is most handsomely illustrated and bound in card board. It is from the press of R. H. Russell of New York, and the price is $1.20 net.

BILLY WHISKERS.

The autobiography of a goat is what the volume of "Billy Whiskers" is and it gives in a most lively style the history of a goat that would butt in. The trouble starts when a gentleman buys "Billy" for his son. The animal immediately causes trouble by getting mixed up with a soda fountain, followed by giving the boys a ducking in a pond.

Like an ordinary mortal, "Billy" is placed under arrest and given a ride in the patrol wagon, and then joins the fire department.

Tired of a single existence "Billy" is married, amid much ceremony, to "Miss Nannie," and then he soon afterwards deserts his wife and runs away and joins a circus.

He is taught all kinds of tricks while with the show, and gets into all kinds of scrapes from causing a farmer's team to run away to butting a young dude into the street, while he was trying to mash a young lady.

"Billy" does not always get the best of the fray, as when with the show he is made to stay in a huge cage with a false horn fastened on his head and his white coat dyed a jet black.

Finally, a thunder storm wrecks the circus and "Billy" is free again. He seeks out his wife and is affectionately received, and with their two children, live happily the rest of their days.

The book is very neatly gotten up and with the many illustrations, done in colors, makes an attractive present. The autobiography of "Billy" is written by Frances Trego Montgomery, and is from the press of the Saalfield Publishing Company of New York. The price of the volume in board cover is retailed at $1.00.

HARPER'S MONTHLY.

More than the usual amount of contributions appear in the November number of Harper's Monthly Magazine. Nearly every conceivable subject is discussed in this issue, and it is made more desirable by many illustrations and drawings. "How the Bible Came Down to Us" is the title of an article illustrated and treated from rare manuscripts and prints. Short stories abound, and the regular columns are as entertaining as ever. Published by Harper Brothers at New York and London.

THE CENTURY.

The most attractive feature of the Century for November is the drawings in color by Maxfield Parrish. The drawings are all of the West, and are are most realistic and cleverest piece of work that has ever appeared in a monthly magazine. "The Yellow Van" makes a well written story, and the description of the New York Police Court gives life in all its forms. Besides the special features, the magazine is well filled with articles from regular contributors, and is well worth the price of thirty-five cents. Published by the Century Publishing Company of Union Square, New York.

THE KNOCKER.

"The Knocker," a unique publication edited by Will A. Campbell, contains several interesting articles in its November issue. They are by the editor, William Allen White, Will Reed Dunroy, Charles Curtz Hahn and others. Published at Blair, Nebraska.

THE ECONOMIST.

This week's American Economist, which is devoted to the protection of American labor and industries, contains much of interest to those interested in economical questions.

THE STRAND.

The Thanksgiving number as well as the November of the Strand is resplendent with new ideas and original stories, the principal ones being "The Scorceress of the Strand," and "A Spirit of Avarice." The humor of sport is detailed in an interesting article, and some of the wonders of the West are illustrated by photographs. Short stories are frequent and the issue is an exceptionally good one from every standpoint. Published in London and distributed by the International News Company of 83 and 85 Duane street, New York.

THE SMART SET.

A magazine of cleverness can easily be said of the November number of the Smart Set, with its well selected reading matter and its attractive illustrations. "Lady Ursula's Lovers" is the title of the main story in this issue, and it is followed by numerous short stories of merit and with clever plots and endings. The usual departments are as well edited as ever, and on the whole the magazine is one of the best distributed. Published by the Ess Ess Publishing Company of 452 Fifth avenue, New York.

THE KNOCKER.

The Knocker is the rather startling title of a little pamphlet that the author says is a journal for cranks. In the November issue it knocks on "While Dowie Prayed," "On Getting Old," "On Kissers," and many other things. The Knocker has been denounced by some old be-whiskered hevirgins known as pulpiteers, but the world goes on, as the editor, Will A. Campbell, puts it. The journal is sold for ten cents, and is published by the Exchange Printing Company of Nebraska.

TEN STORY BOOK.

As its name would suggest the Ten Story Book is a little magazine containing ten stories of unusual merit by well-known authors. "The Drop of the Hat" is made the main feature for the November number. Published at 263 Dearborn street, Chicago.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.

Every art known to the housewife is portrayed in the November number of the Good Housekeeper. Short articles on interesting subjects are between those on cooking, and the subject of making the home attractive, and the magaznie will beappreciated by all women. New table receipts are printed and the subject of fashions is discussed very fully. Published at Springfield, Mass., and Chicago.

THE OUTLOOK.

"Shall the Tariff be Revised" is made the feature for discussion in the present issue of the Outlook. Interviews with Governor Cummins, Senator Allison, Archbishop Ireland and other prominent authorities are given on the subject. The trust problem is taken up and other topics of the day are gone over. The regular departments are as entertaining as in the past, and this week's issue is well worth reading. Published at 287 Fourth avenue, New York City.

THE LIVING AGE.

The present week's issue of the Living Age has many well selected articles on the subjects of passing moment, and is th ebest authority to keep one postd on all that is happening throughout the world. Published at 295 Congress street, Boston.

HARPER'S WEEKLY.

The settlement of the great coal strike is the burden of the matter in Harper's Weekly for this week. Edmund J. James is the American to be selected as the American of tomorrow. It gives a magnificent half-tone of Hall Caine and one of the Lady Curzon. The largest electrical power house in the world is described, both by picture and by pen. An article on a portable school-house is interesting and the scholars are shown photographed while studying, and while the schoolhouse was in motion. The stories are well selected and the regular columns are carefully edited. Published at New York.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN.

To the farmer and orchardist will the Country Gentleman appeal with its hints on the till in the soil and the care of the trees. WOMAN REPUBLICAN.

Miss Helen V. Boswell mother of the Woman's Republican Club, has recently been made an LL. B. by the Washington, D. C., College of Law. "I wanted to study constitutional law," said Miss Boswell, "so that I might do more intelligent and thorough work, not only in this campaign, but in all subsequent movements in which the Republican party may be involved." In a large class of men admitted to practice law Miss Boswell stood second. She is now first vice-president of the Womans State Republican Association. A petite, charming little woman, with gazelle-like eyes, clear, rosy, complexion, is Miss Boswell. In a pale lavender foulard gown and wearing a becoming black hat, Miss Boswell has all the daintiness and grace of the well-bred society woman, and it is difficult to associate her with the type once identified in the public mind with the "cackling hens" of Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton's tentative days. Miss Boswell came over from Washington to welcome Miss Odell. "You see," said Miss Boswell, with her sunniest smile, "our club there was formed about the time Governor Odell, who was then in Congress, was beginning to attract marked political notice. He listened patiently to our propositions and never failed to lend a helping hand, and he is quick to see to-day the value of the Woman's West End Republican Club. We May yet put him in the White House."

WHAT EQUAL SUFFRAGE DOES.

The Woman's Journal has an interesting paper on the "Fruits of Equal Suffrage." These results are summed up thus: In Wyoming equal suffrage has passed a law that men and women in the employ of the State (including women) shall be given equal wages for equal work; has raised the age of protection for girls to 18; has led to the repeal of the law that had licensed gambling, forbidden child labor, and provides a severe punishment for cruelty to children. In Utah the law gives the same wages to male and female teachers; the age of protection to girls is raised to 18; doubles the number of free scholarships in the State Normal School and provides good sanitary conditions in schools. In Idaho, besides the same laws concerning teachers and protection for girls, city councils are authorized to levy a one-mill tax for free reading-rooms and libraries; 3 per cent of all school moneys is to be set aside for the founding of school libraries, and establishing a State library commission, two members of which must be women, and two others the president of the State University and the Sate Superintendent of Public Instruction.

In Colorado the women have helped make laws establishing a State Industrial School for girls and State home for dependent children removing the emblems from the Australian ballot (the nearest approach to an educational qualification for suffrage), making fathers and mothers joint guardians of their children, enlarging women's property rights, raising the age of protection for girls to 18, introducing the indeterminate sentence, so much desired by the friends of prison reform; establishing parental schools, providing for the care of the feeble-minded, and for the preservation of forest trees; giving the board of charities and correctionsynary institutons, and providing an annual appropriation to buy books for the State Library; also in Denver ordinances placing drinking fountains in the streets, forbidding expectoration in public places, and requiring smoke-consuming chimneys on all public and business buildings. Among other results of equal suffrage is a much better enforcement of the laws forbidding the employment in factories of children under 14, requiring merchants to furnish their saleswomen with seats, regulating the sale of liquor and tobacco to miners, and others of the same general character. Since equal suffrage was granted the number of no-license towns in Colorado has been more than quadrupled. A very great good has been accomplished in Australia, where before equal suffrage became a law a man could will all his property away from his wife, leaving her penniless, she having no right f dower. In those Australian colonies where woman enjoys equal suffrage the law has been amended so that a man is obliged to leave his property to his wife and family; in the other colonies the old law is in force. In Australia and New Zealand the laws of divorce are the same as in England, infidelity in the part of the wife being sufficient for ground for the husband to get a divorce, but a husband's infidelity not entitling the wife to any redress. That law is now binding on both, so that husband and wife have equal rights. Another paper on the woman's vote shows that in Wyoming, where they have had full suffrage for 33 years, according to the Wyoming secretary of state 90 per cent of women vote. In Cleveland, O., in 1896 there were 2,728 women registered to vote at biennial elections of school director; in 1898, 5,648; in 1900, 9,160, and in 1902, 14,758. In the first year, 1897, when women voted for school committee, only 934 registered in Boston, but in 1899 11,622 were registered. In Colorado women have had full suffrage 11 years. At the election last fall in Denver 31,789 men voted, and 23,449 women. In South Australia women's vote has grown from 68,375 to 71,682. In New Zealand, where equal suffrage was granted in 1893, the number of women qualified to vote was 139,915; of these 109,461 registered and 83 per cent voted; of the men who registered only 67 per cent voted. The Melbourne Tocsin says that at the last general election 120,000 voted.

THE EMPRESS OF GERMANY.

It is whispered about that the present Empress of Germany, Empress William as she is called, is as little popular in the empire as was Empress Frederick, and has not the compensating joys of a happy home life that atoned to Empress Frederick for the lack of public favor. In one way there is no reason why one should be sorry, for happiness is not for queens or kings. They early learn that they must do without it. Yet the loneliness of either, who is a cipher, neither liked nor admired, must be hard to bear. The crowning proof of the utter disregard of her possible feelings is, or so the London World says, that on the death of the mother of the Empress, between the death and the funeral, all Berlin celebrated the Emperor's birthday, the streets were filled with shouting crowds, balconies were festooned with flowers, flags were flying, and at night there was an illumination. Now, if true, the unkindest thing was the fact that the Emperor did not forbid the rejoicings on the plea of his wife's grief. Still, every one knows William's idea of the only use of a woman—that she should bear children and be a good housekeeper. The Empress has done her duty in those respects. She is, according to all accounts, a good hausfrau, that and nothing else. She has no beauty and not much mind, and, it is stated, little or no interest or knowledge of public affairs. She has been so unfortunate as to grow stout, and the Emperor is said to have a particular objection to stout women. So she undertook some course of treatment which reduced her as slight as a girl, but at the expense of her health. The Empress's one compensation is said to lie in the friendship existing between herself and the countess Waldersee, a very clever woman and an American. She appreciated and liked the Empress when Princess William, and has been for some time adroitly at work, both on the Empress and William. The task with him was to convince him that disregard on the part of any one of the Empress was a discourtesy toward him, and therefore a thing that he should resent. The countess's task with the Empress was to get her to interest herself in charitable and philanthropic work, to become the patroness of societies and institutions, particularly a home mission just organized by Dr. Stoecker, the court chaplain, and she prevailed on her to become its patroness. Unfortunately Dr. Stoecker was one of the leaders in the anti-Semite party, and the Empress, without any intention on her part, became involved, as far as a use of her name went. Of course this had the worst result, and she was informed that she would better confine her efforts to the welfare of her family affairs. And this is said to have aided the Emperor's efforts to gain popular favor, and she is now and will always be a figurehead only, without following and without regard.

SOMETHING ABOUT LACE—OLD AND NEW

There has not been a time for many years when so much lace has been bought and worn as now. It is by no means the same thing to buy and wear, for some rich women love to buy and hoard laces, which, though they were able to purchase, they can scarcely imagine the occasion when such rare pieces might be worn with propriety or safety.

There are always impecunibus princesses and unfortunate members of noble families in straits for money, and collectors are on the lookout for such chances, and when the choice portions of the wardrobe of these unfortunates come in markets, as they often do, then is the opportunity.

It was not long ago that one read in a New York paper of a woman who went to one of the great gambling resorts in Europe and got great bargains in laces that had been pawned and lost by titled gamesters; others who are conversant with the subject, and are absolutely aware of the real value of a bit of lace, haunt pawnshops in all countries, and are content to spend a day turning over the miscellaneous collection of stuffs in curio shops, if they find an odd bit of lace at the end.

Others who do not insist that their laces should be old visit the makers. They go about among the lacemakers in Ireland, Irish lace having become the fashion of late years, since Queen Alexandra took up the crochet lace, and Lady Aberdeen sent Irish lacemakers to the Chicago exposition. The crochet lace made fashionable by Alexandra is wrought in sections. One girl crochets a dozen roses, another a dozen shamrocks, and so on. They are arranged in a pattern, and another girl sews them together and fills in the thread between. The Irish point is very beautiful and expensive, a piece two inches wide costing a matter of $16 a yard, and Lady Aberdeen is said to have had a flounce made for exhibition that was valued at between £5000 and £6000.

In an interesting book on the history of lace by Mrs. Bury Palliser are many facts one is glad to know. Mrs. Palliser traces the beginnings of lacemaking back to the time of the Pharohs and finds its first introduction to European civilization to be the time of the Crusades, when returning warriors brought home to wives and daughters bits of lace from the Holy Land. There is a legend that the first Italian lacemakers had a Byzantine teacher.

Brussels lace, which came into market early in the sixteenth century, was for some time known as Point d'Angleterre. Mrs. Palliser explains the reason:

"In 1662 the English Parliament, alarmed at the sums of money expended on foreign point and desirous to protect English bone-lace manufacture, passed an act prohibiting the importation of all foreign lace. The English lacemakers, at a loss how to supply the Brussels point required at the court of Charles II, invited Flemish lacemakers to settle in England, and there establish the manufacture. The scheme, however, was unsuccessful. England did not possess the necessary flax, and the lace made was of an inferior quality. The merchants, therefore, adopted a more simple expedient. Possessed of large capital, they bought up the choicest laces of the Brussels market, and then, smuggling them over to England, sold them under the name of Point d'Angleterre, or "English Point.'"

Every one knows the rage for laces that existed in England for many years from the days of Elizabeth down through the Georges. Even the austere Cromwell wore ruffles of rich Flanders lace. Lace was a favorite article for smuggling in spite of strict revenue laws. In the spring of 1764 revenue officers seized and burned a quantity of beautiful French lace, weighing nearly 100 pounds. Men and women were seized and searched on the streets. The following facts seem almost incredible:

When the body of his grace of Devonshire was brought over from France, where he died, the officers, to the anger of his servants, not content with opening and searching his coffin, poked the corpse with a stick, to ascertain if it was a real body; but the trick of smuggling in coffins was too old to be attempted. Forty years before, when a deceased clergyman was conveyed from the Low Countries for interment, the body of the corpse was found to have disappeared and to have been replaced by Flanders lace of immense value—the head and hands and feet alone remaining. This discovery did not, however, prevent the high sheriff of Westminster from running—and that successfully—£6000 worth of French lace in the coffin of Bishop Atterbury when his body was brought over from Calais for interment.

Curiously enough, the French Revolution, that destroyed so much, put an end to the fashion of wearing choice laces. Muslins and gauzes came in, laces went out. Now there is a revival of the art, though it is not probable that lacemaking and the using of it for the toilet will ever again assume the proportions of the past.

It is said that only in the city of Brussels can the finest lace be made. Other cities have tried and failed. The very fine thread is made of flax grown in Brabant, and spun in dark, damp, underground rooms, where no dry air can affect the threads. It is the extraordinary fineness of the thread that fixes the high price of the lace, and the impossibility of getting it elsewhere gives Brussels its monopoly. Apropos of Brussels lace there is a pretty story told. One Brussels producer, after the battle of Waterloo, opened his factory to the wounded soldiers and provided nurses and every possible comfort to the forty soldiers sheltered there. As a consequence, when he resumed work once more, all the English ladies that passed through the city crowded his shop to buy laces of the man that had succored their husbands and brothers, so that he became rich.

France has always been fond of lace. The earliest record of lace being the fashion is in 1540. Courtiers and ladies alike wore ruffs and cuffs. The gentlemen of the day even filled in the tops of their boots with ruffles of Genoa point, and hung flounces of Venice point from their knees. There was a successful effort by Colbert to make French laces fashionable, and the Pointe de France became the lace for the rich, though its price stood in the way of people of moderate means, who turned to pillow lace, which in its turn was received with favor. In 1832-33 cotton thread was first introduced. There is very little real Valenciennes made, its expense depending on the great length of time necessary for its making. With some designs not more than 24 inches are made in a year. Of course the price is almost prohibitive, and there seldom are real laces seen.

POETRY THAT WILL INTEREST THE WOMEN

LIFE.

A little work, a little play
To keep us going and so good day!

A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so good night!

A little fun to watch the sorrow
Of each day's growing—and so good tomorrow!

A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing—and so goodby!
—George du Maurier.

AMERICA.

And thou America,
Thy offspring towering e'er so high, yet higher thee above all towering,
With Victory on thy left, and at thy right hand Law;
Thou Union holding all, fusing, absorbing, tolerating all,
Thee, ever thee, I sing.

Thou, also thou, a World,
With all thy wide geographies, manifold, different, distant,
Rounded by thee in one—one common orbic language,
One common indivisible destiny for all.
—Walt Whitman, "Song of the Exposition."

MY COMRADE.

I never build a song by night or day,
Of breaking ocean or of blowing whin,
But in some wondrous unexpected way,
Like light upon a road, my Love comes in.
And when I go at night upon the hill,
My heart is lifted on mysterious wings:
My Love is there to strengthen and to still.
For she can take away the dread of things.
—Edwin Markham.

REST.

My feet are wearied and my hands are tired—
My soul oppresed—
And I desire, what I have long desired—
Rest—only rest.

'Tis hard to toil—when toil is almost vain,
In barren ways;
'Tis hard to sow—and never garner grain
In harvest days.

The burden of my days is hard to bear,
But God knows best;
And I have prayed—but vain has been my prayer—
For rest—sweet rest.

'Tis hard to plant in spring and never reap
The autumn yield;
'Tis hard to still, and when 'tis tilled, to weep
O'er fruitless field.

And so I cry a weak and human cry,
So heart oppressed;
And so I sigh a weak and human sigh;
For rest—sweet rest.

My way has wound across the desert years,
And cares infest
My path, and through the flowing of hot tears
I pine for rest.

'Twas always so; when still a child I laid
On mother's breast
My wearied little head; e'en when I prayed
As now—for rest.

And I am restless still; 'twill soon be o'er;
Far down the West
Life's sun is setting, and I see the shore
Where I shall rest.
—Father Ryan.

HOUSEHOLD QUERY.

Now man has come to take the place
That once was woman's own;
To what will woman turn her face
That she may have alone?

In household kitchen once she ruled
With autocratic sway;
In housemaid's duties she was schooled;
But how is it to-day?

A man is now the substitute
For her we knew of yore;
As cook man's rule is absolute,
Man greets us at the door.

The cook's a man, the maid's a man,
Though strange this truth may seem:
Man is the lord of the mop and pan
In this most modern scheme.

Though woman shares in other ways—
In business life is known—
How can we tell these modern days
What sphere is woman's own?
—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE ROSE IN OCTOBER.

O, late and sweet; too sweet, too late!
What nightingale will sing to thee?
The empty nest, the shivering tree,
The dead leaves by the garden gate,
And cawling crows for thee will wait,
O, sweet and late!

Where wert thou when the soft June nights
Were faint with perfume, glad with song?
Where wert thou when the days were long
And steeped in summer's young delights?
What hopest thou now but checks and slights,
Brief days, lone nights?

Stay! there's a gleam of winter wheat
Far on the hill; down in the woods
A very heaven of stillness broods;
And through the mellow sun's noon heat,
Lo, tender pulses round thee beat,
O, late and sweet!
—Mary Townley.

POSSIBILITIES.

A little rift among the clouds
To let the sunshine through,
And, lo, the day that was so dark
Is brightened and new glories mark
The ways that we pursue.

A smile that costs the giver naught,
A little word of praise,
And some one, wavering, may take
The way wherein his work shall make Him happy all his days.
—Pittsburg Dispatch.

THE STRANGER CHILD.

Now the night is dark,
Comes a little stranger child
Now the house is still;
Toiling up the hill.

Listens at the door,
Peers within the pane,
Reaches for the broken latch
Rusted with the rain.

Murmurs in the dark,
Sobs beneath his breath,
Whispers to the empty rooms,
Quiet, now, for death.

Wanders through the lane
Where the rosebush grew,
Tries to reach the cobwebbed sill
Drenched and dark with dew.

Calls—and calls in vain!
For the man, alone,
Dies before a dying fire,
Hears no human tone.

Only his soul's voice
Calls the dull roll through;
Good so often long to wait,
Ill so quick to do.

Only his soul's eyes,
Shamed, and tired of all,
Watch the red life ebb and flow,
Watch the last sands fall.

And the little child
Clinging to the sill
Weeps and stretches tiny hands,
Weak for good or ill.

Slow the dying coal
Drops from out the fire;
Slowly sinks the house of clay,
Empty of desire.

Through the creaking blind
Slips the spirit now,
Shudders at the stranger child,
"Thou? my lost youth, thou?"
—Josephine Dodge Daskam.

BELINDA ANNE.

On Hallowe'en night when the logs blaze bright
And the frost lies white on the ground,
And the bleak wind moans in dismal tones,
Then we love to gather around
The cheerful glow on the hearth, and oh,
That's the time when Belinda Anne
Such tales will tell of what befell
When she first met the "Pollywog Man."

She said that the Pollywog had a head
That measured a yard around,
And the queerest eyes, like pumpkin pies,
And walked a foot from the ground—
She thought his shoes must be twenty-twos:
And he'd a beard of black and tan,
Which, to his disgrace, he shook in the face
Of poor Belinda Anne.

Then she told how once when walking about
She came to a fairy court,
And the gallants gay, in bright array,
About her 'gan to sport.
They were choosing a queen, such a beauteous scene
Ne'er had been since this world began,
And, by gen'ral consent, the most votes went,
Of course—to Belinda Anne.

One night she said she'd pains in her head
And her work wasn't half way through—
Dishes piled in a heap—when she fell asleep,
As most of the hired girls do.
Then she woke with a start, for, bless your heart,
There stood the Pollywog Man,
Washing dishes ascore and scrubbing the floor,
To the joy of Belinda Anne.
—Charles Noel Douglas.

A PUMPKIN PIE VISION.

Old Doddridge ate his frugal lunch
Of milk and pumpkin pie,
And fell to musing as he ate
Of days that were gone by.
The pie a rich aroma sent
To his reflective brain,
And, oh, the pictures it called up—
An old time country lane.

An old time country lane, with grass
All straggling by the side;
A boy, who trudged along the path,
With basket at his side—
A jolly boy, whose eyes were keen,
Who felt inclined to sing,
And saw the glory of the fall
And fun in everything.

And then he saw a comely girl,
With cheeks of honest red,
Who smiled at him with sunny glance
And tossed her shapely head.
He saw the old schoolhouse again,
And heard the teacher speak.
And on the roads of frozen snow
He heard the wagons creak.

He saw the shellbark hickory tree,
He saw the kitchen door;
He saw the pantry shelves again—
With pumpkin pies galore;
He sniffed the tank of cider sweet—
The bloom of days gone by—
And then old Doddridge wakened up
And ate his pumpkin pie.
—Josh Wink, in Baltimore American.

FACTS, FADS AND FANCIES FOR WOM[redacted]

THE WOMAN'S FAULT.

A woman of experience laid down the law lately as follows: "In almost all the cases of unhappy marriage, or family trouble, it is the woman's fault. Somebody has to be unselfish, and keep putting things right, in every household, and the woman is the one to do it. When she stands on her rights and will not do it she may be a fine character, but the result is disastrous."

It was a hard saying—a counsel of perfection. Yet it had more than a little wisdom in it. Every one recalls household situations where a woman standing on clear rights would have probably wrecked all future peace, but where a woman' wise unselfishness, instead, brought matters slowly right in the end. Patient Grizel may have gone too far, but she was on the right track. There is such a thing as a determined renunciation of self in order that a tangle may be set right, which produces even a higher moral effect than insistence upon just rights. Such open-eyed renunciation is very different from being trampled upon or ground down in spite of protest. It has the dignity and the power that belong to all voluntary sacrifice; and it calls out in response to its own nobility all the nobility there is in the souls around it.

Individualism is woman's watchword to-day. But individualism cannot be practised by all the members of a family without breaking up family relations in short order. Some one in the household must take the collective view, which subordinates individual wills to the common good. One such person in a house will make it a home; and woman has always been the home-maker, rather than man.

AN ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCEMENT.

At a luncheon this autumn, to announce an engagement, hearts predominated in the decorative and menu scheme. The luncheon was given by an aunt of the fiancee to a dozen of her girl friends. At each cover were heart-shaped boxes filled with rice, to be kept for the wedding rice-throwing. The center-piece of pink roses outlined a heart. Over the head of the guest of honor hung a large double heart, gilded, and filled with pink rose petals. This heart was of two pieces of pasteboard fitted together. A pink ribbon hung from the top of one, and the bottom of the other, and as the formal announcement was made at the end of the luncheon two girls reached up and pulled, each of them a ribbon, which released the shower of rose leaves on the head of the blushing bride-to-be. One of the leaves was heart salad. This was tomato jelly moulded in heart shape, each resting on a lettuce and masked with mayonnaise into which broken English walnuts had been stirred. With this were handed round heart sandwiches made of small crustless hearts of brown and white bread put together—white and brown. A large heart-shaped cake bore a double monogram, and was pierced by a golden arrow.

JANE HADING'S EYES.

An odd little story is told about the shape of the eyes of Mme. Jane Hading, the French actress, which are very remarkable. They are of the clearest and purest brown, like that of mountain brooks or wave-washed onyx, and veiled with a thick fringe of black and silky lashes.

But this is not all. Her eyes are unusually and extraordinarily long, and this length is due to artificial means.

It is a custom among the Turks to lengthen the eyes by cutting the corners. This is done very early, at the age of 2 or 3 years, the outer corner being deftly slit with a lancet about the twelfth part of an inch.

While the wound is healing the lids are drawi outward every day, and when it is quite cured the eye is still submitted to the drawing process every day for a long time, with the result that it becomes long and narrow.

The story about Mme. Hading proceeds to declare that her father was in Turkey and saw this practice, and determined to try it on his little girl, then about 3 years old. Whether the story is true or not, one thing is certain, that the admirers of the actress declare that she has the most beautiful eyes on the stage.

FLOWERS AND SENTIMENT.

It may prove interesting to prospective brides, who choose their wedding flowers with so much sentiment, to know why certain blossoms have been associated with marriage feasts.

Orange blossoms are the first flowers thought of in connection with weddings. The Saracens used orange blossoms to crown their brides, and regarded them as the emblems of happiness and prosperity and as a sign of fecundity. The fruit has also its association with the hymeneal altar, as the golden apple presented by Jupiter, to Juno on the day of their nuptials is supposed to have been an orange. In Sardinia it is customary to attach oranges to the horns of the oxen which draw the nuptial conveyance. Brides and bridegrooms also are sprinkled with orange flower water, and in ancient times the bridal bed was decorated with sprigs or rosemary and orange blossoms. The Germans, who use wreaths of myrtle, consider this vine symbolic of purity and fertility, and for the same reason the Roman bridegroom wore a crown of myrtle, while the bride's wreath was of roses and myrtle. Myrtle was said to be a favorite of Venus, the goddes of love, and is symbolic of love. In Prussia, however, it is held to be an evil omen for a bride to plant myrtle, and in other parts of the German empire verbena wreaths replace the myrtle. In other parts of this same country a hat made of verbenas is presented to the new-made wife, and is supposed to place her under the special protection of Venus Vietrix.

In former times rosemary was considered the bridal flower, and was entwined in wreaths and dipped in scented water. In Greece the altar is entwined with ivy, and the priest presents a branch to both the bride and bridegroom as a symbol of the indissoluble knot of matrimony, while the wreaths of the bridal couple are, in some parts of this land, composed of poppies. In old Roman times, poppy wreaths were only worn by married women, supposed to indicate, by their brightness, the joy and happine[redacted] married life. In other parts o[redacted] Greek isles brides wear hy[redacted] wreaths instead of orange blossoms. In Tripoli all bridal gifts are sent covered with flowers.

Rose crowns sometimes were worn as bride wreaths, being especially love's flower, but the lily of the valley, now so often used as the bridal flower, was called virgin's tears and was considered most unlucky as a wedding flower.

USEFUL FANCY WORK.

Basketry remains a most popular form of fancy-work for young women. On many summer piazzas reeds and raffia have been woven into shape while tongues flew or some one read aloud. It is an art easy to acquire, and fascinating in its development, for so soon as a few lessons have been taken, the worker sees stimulating possibilities in giving rein to her own fancy in design. Many Christmas presents will take this form, as the range of service for the reed bowls and boxes is wide and useful.

TO KEEP OFF WRINKLES.

Six drops of olive oil used every third night to massage the lower face and throat will long keep off the first throat [redacted]ngers, and stroke the oil in gently yet firmly. Leave it on overnight, washing it off in the morning with hot water and without soap. If it is found that every third night keeps the skin a bit too oily, the interval may be a little lengthened.

FOR THANKSGIVING DAY.

Try for the Thanksgiving feast ham baked in cider. This can be done the day before, and warmed through when needed. Choose a good lean ham of about eight pounds. Wash thoroughly, and over the fleshy part sprinkle chopped onions, a little cloves and allspice, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, and a half-teaspoonful of ground ginger. Make flour and water into a paste as thick as dough, and cover over the ham. Put skin side down in the roasting-pan with two quarters. Cook slowly for three hours, basting every ten minutes. When done, take off the paste and rind, and set away. An hour before serving return to the baking-pan, flesh side down, brush the fat portion with beaten egg, and sprinkle thoroughly with chopped parsley and bread crumbs mixer, and let the ham heat through in the oven. Boil the cider in which the ham was first roasted down to a creamy sauce; remove every bit of fat from the surface, reheat, and send round in a sauce-boat with the ham.

The Latest Paris Modes In Cloth Frocks.

It is probably because Parisians pay so much attention to their gowns for street wear that the French women have gained the reputation of being the best dressed women in the world, for in public they always look smart and trim and are charmingly gowned. By charmingly gowned is not meant conspicuously gowned, for it is only of late years that the conspicuous style of dress has been adopted, and even now the smartest gowns, while they are noticeable for beauty, do not attract attention by the brilliancy of their coloring.

Cloth always is in good taste for street gowns. It drapes well, hangs well and can be made to fit almost perfectly, for it follows the lines of the figure, and if the figure be not all that might be desired it can be helped to a surprising extent. The soft, silky finish of many of the new cloths makes them possible to deal with in any style of costume, and there are many weights of cloth—the heavy, thick ones that are used in coats and short skirts or in the long coats and cloaks; the medium weight, in plain or figured effects, and the light yet warm varieties of which the smart reception gowns are made and which this season are preferred to any others, for they can stand so much handsome trimming, can be made up in a variety of designs, and when trimmed with braids or bands of the same material are exceedingly handsome.

First among the cloth gowns come the white ones of a material so soft in finish that they look like kid. This is made up with the all white effect or with inserted lozenges of velvet of different colorings, or with round insertions of black velvet alternating with round insertions of Persian lamb. When the square lozenge insertions are used they are outlined with folds of the cloth, and this trimming is put around the foot of the skirt, down the front of the waist and also on the lower part of the sleeves. Another favorite style of trimming is the Persian designs, either in braid or in cloth put on in bands around the foot of the skirt, down the front of the jacket and around the collar. Other white gowns have insertions of heavy lace, and are made very much on the plan of the white muslin gowns trimmed with heavy lace that have been so fashionable all summer. Few of the white cloth gowns are made short. Those that are short look conspicuous. They are made on the lines of the muslin or wash gowns, with a long-skirted coat, and the skirt of the gown long enough to clear the ground. There is no trimming whatever, except on the revers, which are faced with dark velvet, braided with narrow soutache braid or with gilt. There is no lace on them, and the whole effect is plain and severe. With them are worn white furs, white felt or beaver hats, and, as has been said, they are certainly conspicuous, although they are smart.

The pale tints of blue, gray and rose pink are immensely fashionable, especially for young girls, and the debutantes of this season are to revel in these dainty light colorings in cloth gowns, elaborately fashioned and made with waist to match the skirt and coat to wear over the same. A smart model is one of the pale blue shades, exceedingly light in color, the skirt having stitched pleats and a tremendous flare around the foot, long not only in the back, but in front and at the sides, and so cut as to give a slender appearance to the figure. The waist is made with a high girdle of pale blue velvet, and in front there is a jacket effect of lace, with small straps of blue velvet and gilt buckles. The jacket is double-breasted, short and with tails at the back, but made to stand out from the figure in front in what is almost an exaggerated straight front effect and at the same time is not unlike the gray gown trimmed with chinchilla that was such a favorite model in Paris two seasons ago. The blue velvet used for trimming is several shades deeper than the blue of the cloth, and the same model is made with black velvet instead of the dark blue and with rhinestone buckles set with gold. The hat to wear with this costume is of the same color and of the cloth or of rough felt. There is rarely any darker tint used excepting a knot of velvet to carry out the same idea as in the gown.

A few years ago such light colors would have been considered impossible, and would not have been used even for young girls' reception gowns, but now light colors are the rule, and it must be confessed that they look well against the fresh, delicate coloring of the girls from 15 to 20 years of age. A favorite model for either the white or one of these light pastel colored gowns is made entirely in tucks, but is trimmed either with heavy Irish lace or with black velvet, on which is an applique of heavy lace or cut work. This model has been made up for young girls, but is more suitable for older women, as it is rather intricate and elaborate, and there is no question that the simpler effects are better for youthful figures.

There are many women who will not—no matter what the fashion may be—wear light colors, and they have their gowns made of blue, brown or black. Reports to the contrary, black are as fashionable as ever. They have a quiet elegance about them that is becoming and decidedly smart. Either braid or passementerie is in fashion for trimmings, while the Persian embroideries and braids, such as are used on the light gowns, are also much used for black gowns. A touch of colored velvet in the inserted effect is fashionable, but this idea requires careful treatment, otherwise it looks patchy and uneven, a thing always to be avoided.

Short coats are as fashionable as the long ones for costumes, and almost all of them are made with tails in the back—short or long tails. The coats to match skirts are not so smart for the moment. There are any number of long coats that reach to the knees, are quite shapeless and are most elaborately trimmed with lace, fur and embroidery, but these are not intended to be worn with walking gowns. The straight front is as fashionable as ever, but it is not so exaggerated as it was. That is, the line does not curve so sharply from the hip down in front, and all the coats, short or long, hang out from the figure, effectually hiding the lines of the form, excepting in the case of the short, double-breasted coat that is curved at the side to show the wide belt, for wide belts and girdles are worn by those who are slender enough. These girdles or belts play an important part in the street dress, because they are either in a contrasting color or material, made of satin or velvet on the bias, and so arranged that they can be pulled down close to the figure, outlining the waist in a becoming style, and fastened either with an oblong buckle of cut steel or rhinestones or with six handsome buttons. This same fashion was popular last year, but it is now so improved upon as to look almost like a new style.

FANCIES OF THE HOUR.

Mrs. Jules Vatable carries three gold bags, a long reticule of gold net finished at the top with a gold chain, which answers the purpose of a draw string running through tiny gold rings; a small square bag for her pocket handkerchief and a still smaller one for coin.

Mrs. Belmont Tiffany fastens the back of her collar with a small diamond bowknot that looks like a ribbon of brilliants. Its ends are finished with tiny pear-shaped pearls.

Mrs. Arthur Kemp has a pair of pearl earrings, each of which is almost as large as a small bird's egg. They are perfectly matched and screw into her ears. Her mother, Mrs. Frederic Neilson, wears a pair of screw earrings—a turquoise set with diamonds in one ear and a cat's-eye surrounded by these gems in the other.

Mrs. Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., is carrying a small square-cornered bag of black enameled leather, in one of its corners is her monogram in gold, crowned with a tiny gold coronet.

Mrs. James R. Haggin has a "parure" of jet. It consists of a chain of jet beads, which she wears around her neck and which reaches almost to her waist, and a pair of enormous jet ball earrings.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., wears her heart on her belt. Hers is an open heart and a big one, too, all diamonds, and is used as a sort of belt buckle.

Mrs. S. Van Rensselaer Cruger has a long teakwood chain, which she frequently wears. This string of beads, each one of which is almost as large as a twenty-five cent piece, hangs down the front of her dress almost to her knees.

Miss Catharine Cameron has an olive shaped diamond barette, formed by a slender band of gold studded so closely with diamonds that one can hardly see any of the setting.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt carries a yacht with her on rainy days. It is a miniature affair, of course, a picture of a tiny sailing craft embedded in a ball of rock crystal, which forms the handle of her umbrella. It is transparent, and may be seen either from the upper or the lower side of the crystal knob, which is circled by a tiny band of gold, studded with diamonds and rubies where it opens in the centre to receive the boat.

Domestic Life Of The Bulgarians.

The Bulgarian woman is distinctly, unaffectedly domestic. For her the whole round world revolves about her "man," her children, her home. To have a "good man," who provides well for his family; to have as many children and to be as well favored and dressed as her neighbors, to be able to keep all the 180 holidays each year—this is the end and aim of her existence. She has no longings for the unattainable, no reachings out for the mystical beyond.

She is honest, industrious, capable, kind-hearted. She lives in simple, patriarchal style, calls a spade a spade, is scrupulously clean in many things and horribly dirty in others. She loves her children and brings them up in the way they should go by an interplay of resounding slaps and kisses. The children are seldom bathed and never undressed at night, but they are solid, healthy little creatures, about as light and graceful on their feet as a kitchen table.

Neither picturesque nor sanitary are the little huts of the peasants, 10 or 12 of which go to form a Bulgarian village. They are usually set in a meadow by the side of a stream, far back out of sight of the public road. Around a framework of saplings branches are woven in and out and then plastered inside and out with mud. No chimney spoils the symmetry of the low thatched roof, but frequently one sees a melancholy stork perched on one long shank, engaged in clattering his bill or admiring the wheel-like nest he has built there for safety.

One or two little windows, sometimes of glass, oftener without, admit what little light can straggle in. The floor is of beaten earth. There is neither chair nor divan in the room, but a bank of earth at one end, on which is a pile of heavy comfortables and hay pillows. Above it swings a wooden shelf on leather straps to hold the baby, rolled up like an Indian papoose. Here, also, is the meat chest, the wooden tray in which the bread is mixed and the buckets of copper or wood for bringing the water from the village well. In the small outer room is an earth oven, set in a hole in the floor, where the black Bulgarian bread is baked.

On another bank of earth stands the wooden chest which holds the family wardrobe. Under the eaves hang festoons of red peppers, herbs and wool, and on the side wall a pocket holding the wooden spoons used by the family. In the winter the loom completes the furnishing. In the summer it stands outside the door, where the good wife sits and weaves all the stout homespun in which her family is clothed, watching, meanwhile, the family buffaloes wallowing in the mud near by, the children playing with the pigs and fowls or the men cutting sandals for the family from the skin of the sheep, whose flesh is being sodden in the pot.

Lack of Conveniences.

There are no conveniences for the Bulgarian women. Everything is done et arms. If she chops meat she does it on a broad board laid flat on the floor. When she washes, if she lives in the capital, she brings her water from the hydrant in the street or from the old Turkish fountain; if in the country, she scours her garments on the stones by the streams, beating them with a wooden paddle, then rinsing them in clear water. The diet of the peasants is simple in the extreme—onions and garlic galore, beans ditto, cheese made from the milk of the buffalo, also yabart or matzoon, black bread, sometimes made from millet, and an occasional bit of mutton. Their ordinary drink is water, a thin sour wine being reserved for holidays. So simple are their habits that few diseases attack them, even the plague sparing the Bulgarians, while it carried off the more luxurious Turks.

The strong white teeth of the peasants are doubtless due to the course black bread upon which they have subsisted for generations. Among the comparatively well to do poklova is the dish par excellence that crowns the feast. Certain women are renowned for its preparation, for it requires a deft hand and not every one can achieve it. It is compounded of flour, honey and mutton fat, and is about the thickness of ordinary pie crust. By reason of its hardy constitution it may be kept on hand for several weeks at a time, if carefully secluded from the family. Foreigners have to be educated up to poklova on account of the strong mutton fat flavor.

Famous Dish From Buffalo Milk.

The yaourt, or matzoon, made from the milk of the buffalo, is much easier of assimilation, and our American missionaries and teachers grow fond of this dish.

A little of the old matzoon is always kept on hand for a starter, just as our grandmothers kept yeast.

About three pints of milk is put over the fire to boil, great care being taken that it does not scorch. When it has come to a good boil it is set off to cool until just a trifle warmer than lukewarm.

An eighth of a cup of old matzoon is then beaten into it thoroughly and the dish set aside for several hours.

It will then be found thickened like lobbered milk, only much richer.

It is delicious in berry time, served with the wild fruit. A fairly good imitation of the original matzoon may be made in this country from cow's milk, following these directions:

To one quart of fresh milk allow one teaspoonful of sugar and one-third of a cake of compressed yeast. This will make two small bottles. Thoroughly dissolve the yeast and sugar in a small quantity of the milk, which has been slightly heated, in order to start the yeast working. The remainder of the milk should then be heated lukewarm, and in an hour, when the yeast begins to form bubbles on top, added to the yeast mixture. Put into bottles, and if the corks do not fasten with spring snaps tie them firmly in place, lest the gas generating in the fermenting milk may force them out. Stand for two or three hours in a warm place, then in a moderately cool place for two days, shaking thoroughly three or four times a day. On the third day open the bottles and pour the contents into a bowl, to allow the effervescence to pass away. This will take about a quarter of an hour. Pour the matzoon back into the bottles and set on the ice, to prevent any return of the fermentation. As soon as it is chilled it is ready for use. It may thicken slightly during its exposure to the air, but this makes it the more creamy. If you do not care to go to this trouble you can buy the matzoon already prepared at any one of the Armenian or Syrian restaurants or at many of the druggists', and use a portion as a "starter," following the Bulgarian rule.

A few years ago the late Princess Marie Louise of Bulgaria, who was anxious to educate the Bulgarian girls along housewifely lines, assisted in establishing the "First Domestic School for Females" at Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria. Teachers in sewing and cooking were brought from Austria and a kitchen and sewing-room were fitted up for the young girl pupils, who were only too anxious to be taught.

Those who could afford to pay the tuition, which amounted to $10 a year, did no; but the Princess assumed the responsibility for those who were unable to pay. In the kitchen there were no individual gas stoves, as in our cooking schools, for practice work. There was, instead, one big moloch of a range—a perfect marvel to the people unused to stoves of any kind. Upon this altar the culinary priestesses, garbed in their picturesque native costumes, managed to evolve triumphs in the line of toothsome stews, pilaffs, cakes and the like.

As there was no other place in Sofia where European dishes could be obtained, the products of the cooking school became greatly in demand.

Each day in the week, especially on Sunday, a regular dinner is cooked in quantity and borne off when finished by the common soldiers, who "fag" for their keep at nearly every house of any pretension. As the Bulgarian government pays them nothing they are glad enough to become the attaches of families, and the carrying of the dinner is one of their prized prerogatives.

EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Eve's Buckwheat Cakes.

In certain parts of the country the appearance of buckwheat cakes on the breakfast table is governed by the almanac, which decides for us that they are best in winter. In the Catskill Mountains, however, where they are to be had in their perfection, they are all the year round luxuries; not luxuries, perhaps, for those who are used to them, but certainly for visitors from town who are accustomed to the ready-mixed variety.

In a little farmhouse in the heart of the mountains those fragrant and delicious finales to the morning meal were so much appreciated by the boarders last summer that upon their united request they were served every day. This is the way they were prepared:

"I take half a cake of yeast," said Eva, "and soak it in a little warm water—about half a cupful—at night. Then I take two cups of buttermilk, or sour milk, and add to it a little salt. I never think of measuring things, so I really do not know how much buckwheat flour to tell you to add, but just enough to make a medium thick batter. In the morning I stir in one-third of a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little water. That's all."

That is all, so far as the recipe is concerned, but Eve baked the cakes as thin as possible, and this added much to the enjoyment of them. And the way in which she served them contributed in no small way to their success. She always brought in from the kitchen a large dish high with the steaming cakes. This made the tour of the table, each guest helping himself to two. By the time the plate had been passed around and the cakes had been eaten a second relay arrived from the griddle, and this process was kept up until the cry of enough told the cook that no more cakes were wanted. The object in serving them in this way was that each guest should be constantly supplied with hot cakes, and it will be seen that the plan is an improvement upon the old idea of serving five or six as a portion, thus compelling one to eat cold cakes at the end. Delicious home-made maple syrup always accompanied Eve's buckwheats.

One hardly expects to find a cordon bleu in the Catskills, but "Evie," as the old farmer and his wife called their assistant, was a natural-born cook, and made the most delicious pies and cakes imaginable. Here is the way she prepared cheese pie, which, like the buckwheat, made its appearance daily. For one large cottage cheese, two or three eggs, according to their size, were used. A large tablespoonful of butter, two or three cups of sweet cream, sugar to taste, nutmeg or vanilla. Nutmeg is generally liked better than vanilla, however. The cheese and butter were first mixed together, then the eggs thoroughly incorporated. The sugar was then added, and afterward the nutmeg, and last of all the cream, which made it of the consistency of a thick, rich custard. This was baked in an open crust, like the usual custard pie.

Eve's maple syrup cake deserves to be known far beyond the limits of the mountains where she makes her home, for it is so delicious it fairly "melts in the mouth." For it a cup of maple syrup, one egg, one cup of thick, sour cream, a small teaspoonful of soda, a pinch of salt and flour enough to make a very thin batter are required. Flavor with ginger to taste, bake in a flat shallow pan, then cut in squares and you will say that you never tasted anything quite so good in the way of cake.

And if you try Eve's cookies you probably will render the same verdict. They call for a cup of molasses, a cup of sugar, one egg, a tablespoonful of ginger, a cup of butter or lard, or both mixed, and a teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a little water, say about two or three tablespoonfuls. Cream the butter and sugar, beat the egg and add, then the soda, and stir in flour sufficient to roll out quite thin. Cut with a biscuit cutter and bake.

Eve's corn bread was something to dream about beforehand and a delicious reality every morning at breakfast. She made it by taking a cup of sour cream, two tablespoons of sugar, one egg, one small teaspoonful of soda, a scant cupful of Indian meal, half a cup of flour or a little less, about one-third as much flour as meal. She baked it for 20 minutes, cut it in squares, served it piping hot, and always was greeted with a request for more.

Frequently one of the women made a pan of fudge in the afternoon. For it she used one-quarter pound of unsweetened chocolate, broken up into small bits, that would easily melt; two teacupfuls of sugar, half a teacup of cream and butter the size of an egg. These were boiled together for five minutes, beaten well all the time, and before being poured out into the buttered tin waiting for it a teaspoonful of vanilla extract was stirred in. Before the mixture cooled it was cut, or rather marked off, in tiny squares, like caramels.
